97th YEAR, No. 46 * * VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 1980 25 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

Announcement

Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist will be merged on September 2 to become the Times-Colonist.

As an all-day newspaper, the Times-Colonist will continue to publish a morning paper and an evening paper, and subscribers will receive home delivery on the same days as at present.

Today magazine, previously included with only the Times, will be received by morning paper subscribers as well on Saturday. Color comics will also be included on Saturday in both papers.

The six-day home delivery price of $5.00 a month will remain the same but the newsstand price of the Saturday paper, with enlarged content, will be increased 5¢ to 35¢. The Sunday paper, which will continue to include The Islander, will remain at 30¢ at newsstands.

Under the all-day paper publishing schedule, each paper will contain the latest news and sport in its time period. The weekday evening edition will be revised and updated to present all the news which occurred after the morning edition was published.

The new schedule will also permit expanded coverage of local news, sports and entertainment, as well as the introduction of new features. Additional details will be announced in the weeks ahead.

Statement

The familiar question of whether two daily newspapers can survive in Victoria has taken on added urgency in recent years.

Victoria Press, like most other companies, has been hit by rising costs in almost every area of its operation. The fundamental problem is that we have the expense of producing two different daily newspapers — Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist — with the revenue base of one newspaper.

Over the years we have had to cut costs to preserve our present format. The size of each paper's editorial department was reduced. Various features and pages such as travel, book reviews, church news and court reporting became identical in both papers.

These were stop-gap measures. While the distinctiveness of each paper was eroded, the basic two-paper dilemma of high costs and a large total staff was not resolved. In addition, neither paper had the resources to provide ample news coverage of Greater Victoria and the Island.

The effect of escalating costs and diminishing editorial coverage also resulted in Victoria Press becoming more vulnerable to competitors. Newspapers have no immunity from the realities of business life, nor should they. If our present situation continues, our future becomes increasingly less certain.

Cost factors have made two-paper cities a rarity in North America. Where two do exist, one is nearly always losing money and in danger of closing. However, Victoria has had a morning paper since 1858 and an evening paper since 1884. We feel strongly that this tradition should be maintained.

We can meet this objective, and at the same time improve editorial quality and achieve stability by producing an all-day newspaper.

This step, to take effect on September 2, will see the two papers merged to form the Times-Colonist, with a morning edition and an evening edition. Details are included in the announcement above, but days of publication will not be changed and subscribers will receive home delivery on the same days as at present.

The new publishing format will require fewer employees, but the effect will not be nearly so great as conversion to a single paper.

The Times-Colonist will combine the best features of both papers and, with a larger editorial staff than either paper now has, will provide expanded and improved coverage of local news, sports and entertainment. As stronger and more vigorous papers, they will be better able to fill their proper role in the community and ensure their long-term survival.

Family Act revamped

Broad new powers over persons to 19 included

New powers — including entering a home without a warrant — are given provincial government child welfare officials in legislation introduced today by Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy.

A new Family and Child Services Act establishes a position of superintendent of family and child services, replacing the superintendent of child welfare under the present act.

The superintendent will be allowed to take into custody any child under 19 in need of protection. Present age limit is 17.

If access to a child is denied, he may apply for a warrant to enter and investigate the home.

If he thinks the child needs immediate protection he may enter without a warrant.

However, in every case where a child is taken into custody, the action must be reviewed by a court within a specific time. In fact, all actions will be subjected to judicial review and approval.

The superintendent will also be able to enter into an agreement on a wide variety of arrangements for child care, inside or outside the home.

For example, a family requiring temporary assistance in caring for a child can enter into an agreement with the superintendent for short-term care and custody of the child outside the home.

Or on a long-term arrangement, the superintendent may have custody of the child while the parents continue as legal guardians. The act requires the superintendent to investigate all reports of a child who may be in need of protection.

The new act clarifies the duty of every citizen who has reasonable grounds to believe a child may be in need of protection to report the circumstances to the superintendent.

This responibility overrides claims of professional confidentiality.

McCarthy said the act will change the focus such legislation has had in the past.

Instead of dealing only with the state's responsibility for the protection of children, the act acknowledges the role of the family.

"Instead of treating the state and parents as adversaries, it makes provision for them to work together in maintaining the integrity of the family and sharing the burden of caring for children with special problems or needs," the minister said.

The act gives every child the right to protection from abuse and neglect. However, it avoids setting out such rights as "affection, love and understanding."

These terms are included in the United Nations Declaration of the Rights of the Child but they cannot be enforced by law, McCarthy said.

NEW-STYLE POWER POLE inventory is taken by B.C. Hydro storeman Bill Andrews. Concrete poles, also being used by B.C. Tel, are gradually replacing old cedar poles which are becoming increasingly difficult to find. Concrete versions cost more but have much longer life span. They're made in Kamloops. Manufacturing process sees steel rods wrapped with wire mesh then dipped and spun in concrete bath. Poles have been in use in other countries for several years.

Fire guts house, killing man, 23

One person was killed but four others escaped unharmed when fire swept through a small, single-storey house at 3114 Steele in the Burnside district early today.

Dead is Glen Charlie Thomas, 23, of 245 Wilson.

City police said Thomas, his sister Ina Thomas, 30, of 3116 Steele, and Wayne Seitcher, 18, of Port Alberni, were visiting Victoria Seitcher and Rose Peters, both 20, and occupants of the house when the fire broke out shortly after 1 a.m.

A neighbor turned in the alarm but the house was engulfed when firemen arrived.

Police and firemen had to restrain the four who got out from re-entering the burning building to save Thomas.

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — The multi-billion dollar motion picture and television industry, already beset by an 11-day-old actor's strike, has a second work stoppage on its hands Thursday.

The American Federation of Musicians broke off negotiations with major film and TV producers Thursday evening. They officially went on strike at midnight Thursday.

The strike will idle some 5,000 musicians nationwide who work on the scoring of movies and filmed TV programs. The rest of the unions' 300,000 members also will be prohibited from engaging in such work for the duration of the strike.

AFM president Victor Fuentealba said a "total impasse" with the producers' negotiating committee occurred Thursday evening, leading the union to break off the talks.

However, the deadlock did not come over payments from the new home video markets of pay TV, cassettes and discs, the issue that triggered the strike by the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

Instead, Fuentealba said, the deadlock came when musicians insisted on receiving payments for reruns of films and TV programs.

Curtis glum despite $234.9M surplus

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis released the first quarterly financial report of the 1980-81 fiscal year Thursday showing a $234.9 million surplus and then said — in effect — it should be disregarded.

According to the report, the province was actually in better financial shape at the end of June than had been originally predicted in the record $5.8 billion budget introduced in March.

However Curtis said this is not the true picture. His experts have detected economic danger signals, the situation is expected to deteriorate in the coming months and the government's recent belt-tightening measures were entirely justified.

Nevertheless the minister said by exercising continued restraint he still expects to end the year with a balanced budget.

The province's quarterly surplus of $234.9 million, compared to a forecast surplus of $252.3 million.

That means the budgetary balance sheet fell $17.4 million short of expectations.

That is the equivalent of 0.34 per cent of the total budget.

Lumping budgetary and non-budgetary items together, the report shows over-all expenditures exceeded revenues by $118.9 million during the first quarter.

However the forecast had been for an over-all deficit of $135.4 million for the April-June period.

Therefore the government was $16.5 million better off over-all than had been predicted.

The most significant factor in the report, Curtis said, is a 25 per cent drop in petroleum and natural gas revenues including a $33 million shortfall in revenue from the B.C. Petroleum Corp.

The report predicts that shortfall could total $150 million by the end of the fiscal year.

This, together with a projected slump in forest revenues and the continuing recession in the U.S., add up to the minister's indicators of tougher times ahead.

Assailant tees off

A Mill Bay man has been charged with two counts of assault causing bodily harm after two men, including pro golfer Bill Wakeham, were injured this week after being struck by a man wielding a golf club, RCMP said today.

A police spokesman said Wakeham was taken to hospital in Victoria with head injuries after he was clubbed with a driver Sunday in the pro shop at Cowichan Golf Club.

Wakeham, the local club pro, was released from hospital in good condition.

Clifford Horsfall, 37, of 1048 Briarwood Cres. is to appear in provincial court in Duncan Aug. 26.

Parrot smooths CUPW split

OTTAWA (CP) — The Quebec members of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers were accused of blackmailing co-workers from other regions of the country today as president Jean-Claude Parrot restored order to their national convention which nearly collapsed Thursday night.

Parrot, who was acclaimed president for a second three-year term today, presented a compromise package of proposals aimed at getting the convention back on the rails following a nearly all-night emergency sitting of the union's executive to cope with a deep split that emerged when the Quebec delegation walked out in a protest.

He got permission from the majority of 283 delegates to suspend regular rules for a debate on the compromise package despite charges that postal workers from the Atlantic, Ontario and the West were being deprived of their democratic rights so that the Quebecers would return to the convention floor.

Parrot refused to go ahead without the Quebecers who kept the convention waiting more than an hour as they assembled early in the morning for the final day of their five-day triennial convention.

Parrot appealed for unity, accused unnamed individuals of trying to divide the union and warned, "We've got a damned fight coming with our employer again and we're going to need solidarity."

The compromise package reduced the convention debate to a handful of compromise proposals on key contentious issues, including the one that had prompted the Quebec protest.

The Quebecers walked out after the union adopted, by a vote of 136 to 118, a policy under which the union's national directors could reimburse union members for wages they lose when they miss work to attend union area council meetings.

The opponents said it would be grossly expensive and open to abuse.

Union sources said some leaders of delegations from the different regions of the country got carried away in wheeling and dealing for alliances on controversial issues and that the vote backfired on the Quebec group.

Oil to move under sail

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan launched the world's first oil tanker equipped with auxiliary sails today in its latest innovation for saving energy.

The 1,600-ton Shin Aitoku-Maru, slimmer than the conventional tanker to reduce water resistance, took to the sea in a gala launching ceremony at a western Japanese dockyard.

The ship, built by Imamura Shipbuilding Co., is powered by a 1,600-horsepower diesel engine and two 39-foot by 26-foot plastic sails to harness the wind.

The power plant and sails are linked by a microcomputer, which automatically makes a switchover from the engine to sails during the cruise. When not in use, the sails automatically fold against steel masts.

"We decided to build the ship because rising fuel costs eat into our revenue," said Shingo Aitoku, president of the Aitoku Co. shipping firm, the owner of the vessel. "If the system works well, we'll have more ships of the same type."

Aitoku said the Shin-Aitoku Maru will be used to transport oil from Asian countries — China, Malaysia and Indonesia — and for coastal service after a month's trial cruise in Japanese waters.

The concept of using sails to save fuel costs was originally developed by Nippon Kokan K.K., a major shipbuilding firm. The company said a small test ship, Daio, equipped with two square sails and one triangular one collected data while on a test cruise the past few years.

"The test was successful and we were convinced that our system could help reduce fuel consumption to a substantial proportion," said a spokesman for the company.

With wind velocity of 33.5 miles per hour from a 90-degree heading, the engine would come to a halt automatically and the ship would cruise at 15 knots, he said.

The Shin-Aitoku Maru was built for $2.3 million, which is more than $140,000 higher than for similar ships. But the spokesman said the ship can save about 50 per cent of fuel costs which amount to $442,000 annually.

The system is applicable to ships of the 20,000-ton class, he said.

Hospitality industry layoffs climb in wake of beer strike

Layoffs in the hospitality industry are increasing daily with the B.C. brewery shutdown less than a week old, a hotel workers' spokesman said today.

At least 200 members of the Hotel and Resturant Employees and Bartenders' Union have been laid off in the Greater Vancouver area, said Ron Bonar, business manager for the 12,000-member union.

None are eligible for unemployment insurance because the layoffs are a direct result of a labor dispute, Bonar said.

There have been some layoffs in Greater Victoria, where hotel beverage rooms have begun to rely mainly on stockpiled bottled beer which should last between one and two weeks.

Hotelmen are upset because the provincial Liquor Distribution Branch does not intend to arrange for extra quantities of imported U.S. beer for hotel sales.

The branch has asked for increased shipments of Washington-brewed beer only for public sales in liquor stores during the brewery lockout.

"If the hotels aren't going to get any American beer — if it's all going to the liquor stores — I don't see the industry surviving more than a month," Bonar said.

There will be particularly heavy demand for beer during the three-day holiday weekend, depleting the stocks of many drinking places, he predicted.

So far the union's appeals to the government have had no effect.

As many as 20,000 bartenders and waiters in B.C. could be laid off unless hotels and restaurants can replenish vanishing beer stocks with U.S. imports, the president of the B.C. Hotels' Association said Thursday.

"We need American beer right now to keep our staff on the job," Ron Verstrate said.

Mobile home for Fox

VANCOUVER (CP) — Terry Fox will soon have his own mobile home to accompany him on his cross-Canada marathon to raise money for cancer research.

A 22-foot Vanguard motor home provided jointly by the Jim Pattison Group and General Motors of Canada left today to meet Fox, 22, who lost his leg to cancer three years ago.

"He knows about it and he's thrilled," Margaret Chew, spokesman for the cancer society, said Thursday.

Fox, a personal friend, is a private person, she said, and needs a place to call his own.

He also has had trouble adjusting to a different bed every night and the motor home will solve that problem, she said.

Tom Burke, Pattison's special assistant who is driving the motor home to meet Fox, hopes to rendezvous with him by the middle of next week in Ontario around Sudbury or Sault Ste. Marie.

"All they have to do is fill the fridge," Burke said.

Fox spent Thursday night in Parry Sound, Ont.

U.K. nuclear leak lasted eight years

LONDON (AP) — A potentially-lethal amount of radioactivity escaped from a British nuclear complex for a period of eight years before a leak was plugged last year, a report by a group of nuclear inspectors reported Thursday.

The Nuclear Installations Inspectorate, part of the industry ministry, said "lack of safety consciousness and sound professional judgment" was the main cause of the leak at the Windscale site in Cumbria, northwestern England, which has been closed for reasons unrelated to the leak.

The report said the leak easily would have killed anyone within reach. But the radioactive material seeped into the ground 12 feet down and no one on the surface was endangered.

The leak — estimated at more than 100 curies — is understood to be the biggest on record from a nuclear installation in Britain. It was stopped in March last year.

The curie is the unit of measure for radioactivity, which was discovered by Polish-French scientist Marie Curie.

Radioactivity was confined to the ground and contaminated more than 1,800 cubic metres of soil. It was caused when radioactive liquid in a dump overflowed, passed through defects in the wall padding and leaked into the ground near the building's foundations.

The maximum radiation level, measured using probe tubes, was more than enough to kill, the report said. Someone digging 3.5 metres into the ground would have been exposed to 600 REMs (dosages of radiation) an hour. The maximum permissable level of exposure laid down in Britain is five REMS a year.

Nuclear inspectors said they had considered whether to prosecute the British Nuclear Fuels management, operators of the site, but decided against it because of the "prompt remedial action" taken to prevent a recurrence.

The inspectors urged British Nunclear Fuels management to continue to monitor the land contaminated for safety reasons and to decontaminate the building as quickly as possible.

Reacting to the report, British Nuclear Fuels management admitted there had been "departures from safety standards" over the years at the plant and said that the company's senior staff accepted full responsibility for the "lapses."

It added in a statement that in general the safety record at the site was of a high standard and that the possibility of the leak affecting the public was "very small."

U.S. plans to curb Canadian ads in retaliation over border TV

By CARL MOLLINS

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. government announced plans Thursday to retaliate against a Canadian law that discourages the purchase of commercials on American border television stations beamed into Canada.

In an unprecedented use of a 1974 trade act against a broadcasting service, an announcement by the office of trade representative Reubin Askew said President Carter would propose enactment of a law by Congress comparable to the Canadian law.

This means that Americans would be unable to deduct the cost of buying commercials on Canadian TV beamed at Americans in calculating taxes, thus making such advertising prohibitively expensive.

The White House gave no indication when the bill might be presented to Congress.

Although the decision by the Carter administration proposes milder retaliation than demanded by U.S. broadcasters, Canadian authorities expressed disappointment at the American finding that the Canadian TV tax law is an "unreasonable and burdensome" trade action.

External Affairs Minister Mark Macguigan, in a statement issued by the Canadian embassy here, reaffirmed that the Canadian law is an important part of Canada's cultural policy rather than a trade measure.

Bart Fisher, a lawyer representing American border broadcasters who fought the Canadian law for four years, remarked of the ruling that "basically we are delighted."

"It is not as strong as it could be, dut it is certainly strong enough to bring the matter squarely to the attention of the Canadian government."

Fisher estimated that the practical impact of a retaliatory U.S. law would cost radio and television stations in Windsor, Ont., about $5 million a year in advertising that might otherwise be purchased by Detroit-area businesses aiming at listeners and viewers on the American side of the border.

He said the broadcasters will press Congress to act quickly on the proposed legislation to get it into force before the end of the year. In addition, the American broadcasters will continue to press congressmen to keep the Canadian law in mind when dealing with other issues of interest to Canada.

But a Canadian embassy spokesman said the Canadian government is heartened by the fact that the Carter administration declined to link the border TV dispute with other bilateral issues, such as coastal fishing matters.

The protested 1976 Canadian law, designed to stem a flow of advertising dollars away from Canadian television stations in favor of U.S. broadcasts beamed into Canada, withdrew the right of Canadian businesses to deduct the cost of commercial time on American stations as a business expense in calculating income tax.

Askew's announcement said the Canadian law "denies U.S. border broadcasters access to a substantial portion, amounting to approximately $20 million to $25 million annually, of the advertising market in Canada."

Askew said Carter will propose legislation "to deny income tax deductions for costs of advertising primarily aimed at U.S. audiences and broadcast over stations located in Canada."

Askew's trade office administers the American Trade Act, conducting hearings into complaints by aggrieved businesses before panels made up generally of officials from a range of federal departments, including commerce, treasury, labor and justice.

Such a panel heard complaints from owners of 14 American television stations stretching from Washington State to Maine in a series of hearings that included representations from Canadian broadcasting interests.

Tuna terms must come soon, negotiator warns

An agreement between Canada and the U.S. on the West Coast tuna catch will have to be completed within the next two or three weeks, Canada's negotiator in the dispute said Thursday.

Marcel Cadieux, in Vancouver to lay proposals before fishing industry representatives that could settle the dispute, said albacore tuna are expected to move north into Canadian waters soon.

"If the idea is to arrange a reciprocal agreement, we will have to do it soon," he said. "The final decision will have to be made before the albacore are in our waters."

Despite Cadieux's insistence on the urgency of an agreement, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, representing most B.C. fishermen, have rejected the proposals, calling instead for an over-all treaty on the fishery.

George Hewison, the union's secretary-treasurer, said the tuna proposals would not benefit Canadian fishermen.

"We don't see anything for the West Coast fishermen in a tuna-for-tuna agreement," Hewison said.

He noted that salmon accounted for about 50 per cent of fishermen's earnings in B.C.

But Hewison added that if the federal government went ahead with the agreement, the union would just have to grin and bear it.

Earlier this week, the proposals were worked out in talks in Washington. The arrangement, if approved by the two governments, would allow Canadian fishermen to unload tuna catches in U.S. ports in return for unlimited access by U.S. fishermen to migrating tuna in Canadian waters.

Union pullout threat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Construction unions will set up their own central body if the Canadian Labor Congress does not serve them better, the head of the building trades in Canada warned Thursday.

Construction unions "cannot sit idly by and condone an inadequately structured and improperly operated central labor body," James McCambly, executive secretary of the Canadian executive board of the AFL-CIO's building and construction trades department, told the Canadian Conference of Teamsters.

McKitka's pal gets day parole

VANCOUVER (CP) — Surrey developer Walter Link, jailed for three years in May, 1979, for fraud and conspiracy, is free on day parole and planning a new career as a cattle dealer.

Link was associated with former Surrey Mayor Ed McKitka, who was said by a judge to have leaked municipal information to the developer.

McKitka himself was jailed for three years in March this year on charges a judge called "shameful betrayl of public trust" but is free on bail pending an appeal.

Link said at his Surrey home Thursday that he had hoped to get out of prison earlier but was just recently released.

He said he has to spend his nights at a New Westminster half-way house but can spend his days at home or work.

Don't split, Gaglardi warns

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former B.C. cabinet minister Phil Gaglardi, a fundamentalist lay preacher, had a message for Western separatists Thursday: don't do it.

Divisionism is a cancer in Canadian society, "and must of necessity be eliminated," said the outspoken former Social Credit minister, to sporadic smatterings of applause from more than 500 persons at a meeting of the Western-Federation Association.

Periodically shouting and punching the air with his fist, Gaglardi defined divisionism as a state where "everybody wants to run and scatter and divide."

"It is not time to amputate," he said. "It's time to resuscitate; to wake up and flex our muscle."

Western provinces should "band themselves together and speak in a powerful voice," he said.

But Edmonton businessman Elmer S. Knutson brought the house down by thanking Gaglardi "for the same rhetoric we've heard for 114 years."

The association, founded by Knutson, is dedicated to the formation of an independent Western Canadian state.

CP Air wants $3.6 million back

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air is seeking return of $3.6 million it paid the B.C. government in gas taxes it says were illegally imposed.

In a writ registered Thursday in B.C. Supreme Court, CP Air says the government exceeded its powers of taxation between Aug. 1, 1974 when it approved the Gasoline Tax Act, and June 30, 1976, when the act was amended to conform with the British North America Act.

Air Canada launched a similar action Wednesday, but did not say how much it wants refunded.

Man surrenders after firing shots

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A young man who had at least three firearms surrendered to RCMP early today, about 10 hours after police had been called to a house where shots were reported.

Witnesses said a man started shooting a .22-calibre rifle sporadically at about 6 p.m. Thursday. He appeared to be aiming at street lights, with little success.

Police said this morning that the man also had a .303 and a 12-gauge shotgun.

After RCMP surrounded the house, the man roamed up and down the stairs, threatening to blow an officer's head off.

At about midnight, he went out to the porch, aimlessly fired a few rounds, went back into the house and turned off the lights.

Police continued to wait him out, and RCMP Insp. Don Render said "a lot of good talking" by a member of the force persuaded the man to give up at about 4 a.m.

Earlier, at about 10 p.m., a psychiatrist called by police had failed to get the gunman to surrender.

Charges were expected to be laid later in the day against a 23-year-old Kamloops resident, whose name was not immediately released.

National cable system lauded

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of Premier Communications Ltd. of Vancouver said Thursday the merger of his company with Canadians Cablesystems Ltd. of Toronto will create a national cable television system, not just an eastern one.

George Fierheller was reacting to Wednesday's decision by the Canadian Radio-television and Telcommunications Commission to permit Cablesystems to take control of Premier.

The new company will serve about 27 per cent of the Canadian cablevision market.

Fierheller said there will be 40 per cent western representation on the new board of directors. He said the company has tried to ensure representation across Canada in proportion to the number of subscribers in each area.

Sloppiness or worse

The most charitable explanation for the B.C. Place Act introduced this week by the Social Credit government is that the government's legislation committee is growing sloppy — so sloppy that none of the cabinet ministers involved in the bill noticed that it would give the government sweeping and apparently quite unnecessary, powers.

The B.C. Place bill had long been awaited by the legislature. It was expected to be a, routine piece of legislation, little more than housekeeping, just the statutory authority necessary to set up a Crown corporation to take over the planning for the B.C. Place stadium project on the shores of False Creek in Vancouver.

Instead it has become the most controversial bill of the five-month legislative session. And rightly so.

The bill provides the new corporation and/or the government with unchecked and excessive powers in at least three specific areas.

First, it exempts the new Crown corporation from all provisions of the Companies Act. Some exceptions are expected as they would be impractical for a publicly-owned corporation, but many other sections, designed to protect the public interest, apply just as much to Crown corporations as to any other kind.

Second, the bill provides the new corporation with almost unlimited rights of expropriation. The corporation can expropriate any land in the province that it finds it needs for its purposes. That's curious when the whole project is going to be built in one small location, and when almost all the land for it is being made available by Marathon Realty in a land swap.

Moreover, any expropriations under the bill are specifically exempt from the provisions of the new Expropriation Act, designed to ensure that persons losing their land get a fair deal. That act allows the worth of a person's land to be determined by a jury.

Under the new B.C. Place Act, however, any expropriations are undertaken under the terms of the old Highways Act which allows the final judgment to fall into the hand of one arbiter, appointed by a provincial court judge. It was the appearance of possible unfairness in this system that gave rise to the new Expropriation Act.

Last, but far from least, it appears the bill offers the cabinet a blank cheque, renewable annually, to fund the project. Future monies for it apparently need not be approved by the legislature. This is unheard of, since one of the few real powers remaining to the House is to approve or disapprove government spending.

Bills often include a clause saying the government may fund a project from general revenue for the first few months of its existence; this allows a project to begin without waiting for the next provincial budget. The clause always points out, however, that after a budget has been brought down, funds must be appropriated by the legislature. This is not the case, however, in the B.C. Place bill.

If these clauses are the result of carelessness or sloppiness on the government's part, it will be an easy matter to change them. The new Crown corporation can be subject to the appropriate sections of the Companies Act.

Necessary expropriations can be carried out under the Expropriation Act, and the area and purposes allowing expropriations would be drastically narrowed.

The bill could make it clear that, beginning in 1981, the legislature will approve any funding for B.C. Place.

If the government declines to make these changes, British Columbians may have little choice but to believe that something more sinister than sloppiness lies behind the sweeping powers.

Goodbye, chief

Today is the first day of a well-earned retirement for Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons.

Simmons hung up his chief's hat and took off his firemen's boots for the last time Thursday, after 34 years with the Victoria fire department. Those boots are big shoes for someone else to fill.

He watched the fire department grow and modernize under his stewardship. He fought strenuously (but politely) for the maintenance of the highest standards of fire safety in Victoria buildings and of firefighting capability in the department's equipment. He placed great emphasis on public education and awareness as one of the best tools of fire prevention.

At the same time, he always found time for community service, including, most recently, the chairmanship of the Royal Jubilee Hospital Board. He plans to keep that up during his retirement.

Best of luck, chief. The city will miss you.

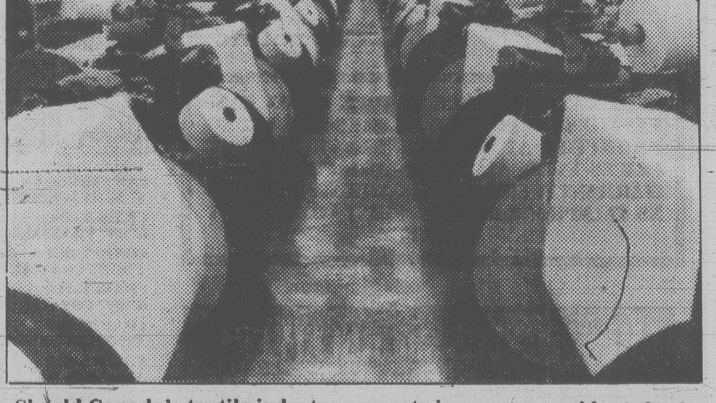
UIC cheaper than wages

The federal government could cut the average Canadian's clothing bill by almost a third, simply by letting him shop the markets of the world, says a Harvard economist, in a controversial study released this week.

Glenn Jenkins urges the government to abandon a two-year-old trade policy which forces consumers to buy expensive Canadian-made clothing instead of cheap garments from Hong Kong, Taiwan, Korea and 11 other developing nations out of the country. Imports from these countries are rigidly controlled.

A typical low-income family would save $86 a year, he estimates.

His study, commissioned by the North-South Institute, a private agency which promotes fairer treatment of the world's poor nations, could not have come at a more sensitive time.



Should Canada's textile industry compete in an open world market?

Major debate

In two weeks, the Textile and Clothing Board, the agency which regulates imports, is to recommend to the government whether to maintain or abolish the import limits. Its report is expected to generate a major debate this autumn.

There is a strong argument for leaving the limits in place. If Canada opened the door to a flood of cheap shirts, jackets, dresses and children's wear from the Far East, thousands of Quebec textile workers would lose their jobs and many small towns in the province would be all but wiped off the map.

But Jenkins shoots down this traditional justification for protecting Canadian jobs with several thought-provoking figures.

He calculates the import restrictions kept 6,000 textile employees at work last year. The average worker earned $10,000. But his job cost taxpayers $32,959. In sheer economic terms, it would have been better to allow all 6,000 to go on unemployment insurance.

"The argument that there are economic or social reasons for preserving employment in the Canadian garment manufacturing sector is very difficult, if not impossible, to justify."

Jenkins says Canada's textile workers are trapped in low-paying jobs with no future. If the government really wanted to help them, it would get them out of the rickety, outdated textile factories of small-town central Canada and pay the cost of offering them useful skills and helping them find new jobs. Other countries have done this, he says. Canada should study their experience.

The government has always said its import quotas were temporary. The idea was to give textile producers a little breathing space — time to modernize and become competitive without the low-wage manufacturers of the Far East breathing down their necks.

Weak industry

It seems however, that they have failed to do this. Charles Barrett, director of regional forecasting for the Conference Board, an Ottawa-based economic-research organization, says Quebec textile makers have not bought new equipment, improved their plants or planned for the future. The minute the floodgates were opened to cheap imports, there seems little doubt many would drown.

On the other hand, consumers are suffering now, especially the poor.

Wealthy shoppers can afford the luxury of designer jeans and made-to-measure suits, but low-income families search desperately for cheap Taiwanese products.

Jenkins estimates the import quotas hit Canada's poor families three times as hard as those in the upper income brackets.

He puts the total cost to the country of the import quotas at $467 million a year — almost enough to pay the old age benefits of every pensioner in the country for a month.

Of this, $334 million goes to the protected Canadian textile manufacturers, $92 million goes to the federal government in the duties on those imports which are allowed in and $41 million goes to the few carefully-selected foreign producers (in some cases they have to be licenced) privileged to sell in Canada.

Clothing is not the only industry with import quotas. Textiles and footwear are protected in much the same manner.

One of the most explosive questions now confronting cabinet as it struggles to fulfill its election promise to give Canada a forward-looking industrial strategy is what to do with the country's weak, labor-intensive industries.

"Given the excessive consumer cost and economic waste, it is recommended that the quotas be abolished," Jenkins says.

But this is not a question economists will decide.

It is up to politicians to balance the suffering of displaced workers against the cost to consumers. When the Textile and Clothing Board issues its ruling next week, the government will be launched toward one of the most painful debates it has to face.

Lalonde opposed pipeline

OTTAWA — Energy Minister Marc Lalonde vehemently opposed this month's cabinet approval of the controversial Canadian section of the Alaskan natural gas pipeline, FP News Service has learned.

Sources say that while the hard-nosed minister was publicly defending the $1.6 billion pipeline against a concerted New Democratic Party attack, he was privately prolonging cabinet discussions with his strong opposition.

"He just did not feel that it was in the long-term interest of Canada's natural energy resources," says a key cabinet source. "He took all of the heat in the Commons but behind the scenes, he was against it himself."

No argument

When asked about this report Wednesday, Lalonde replied: "I can't say anything — cabinet solidarity." Then, with a big grin, he added, "I fully support it" and strolled into a cabinet meeting without further argument.

The pipeline issue exploded into headlines earlier this month when cabinet approved a National Energy Board amendment which allows Alberta's Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. to proceed with the controversial pre-build portion.

The original pipeline scheme — approved by the Commons in 1977 — permitted a 4,794-mile line that would take Alaskan natural gas from Prudhoe Bay through the Yukon, northern British Columbia and Alberta into southern United States markets. No Canadian gas was to be involved.

Since then, however, both businessmen and politicians on both sides of the border have worried that the Alaskan gas will cost too much to make it competitive. Increasing reserves have been found in the southern states. So Foothills concocted a scheme to build the southern portion first, sell Canadian gas and funnel the profits into construction of the northern segment.

Sources say that Lalonde felt that the mere existence of the costly southern portion would encourage the National Energy Board to approve increasing natural gas exports to pay for the line. He was also disturbed that there was no agreement negotiated with the United States to "swap" Alaskan gas in return for Canadian exports when the remainder of the line was built.

His cabinet colleagues, including Economic Development Minister Bud Olson and Industry Minister Herb Gray, argued that the key issue was jobs. They pointed out that the total project is worth about $4.5 billion to Canada and that it will bring 350,000 direct and indirect man-years of employment and provide Canadian steel mills with $2 billion in pipe orders.

For one week, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau teetered on the brink, torn between his energy minister and the majority of the cabinet. He delayed the decision as his ministers argued. Finally, on Thursday, July 18 after another day-long battle, the prime minister gave the go-ahead.

The item that clinched the cabinet decision was a White House assurance that the remainder of the pipeline will be built. Confronted with this document and the majority of his cabinet, Trudeau gave his agonized blessing. And Lalonde stepped into the hotseat.

The NDP promptly charged that the line was a "sell-out" of natural resources. They demanded a minimum year-long moratorium until there was some assurance of gas-swapping arrangements. And they declared that the pipeline was probably illegal since it was a different pipeline altogether from the one approved by Parliament.

Throughout the week preceding the decision, Lalonde had faced an angry Commons. Then Parliament erupted. An adjournment motion was delayed. And for two extra days, Lalonde was grilled.

Opposition MPs cited his own words — uttered last fall — when the Tories were toying with the notion of pre-build and when they had just approved massive natural gas exports. At that time, Lalonde warned: "The worst thing we could do is to export gas for a fast buck or in order to support a faltering dollar." He called for a gas swap deal. And he supported five-year — not the current seven-year — natural gas export permits. The minister even went so far as to brand Tory natural gas export plans as "one of the greatest sell-outs" in Canadian history.

This month, Lalonde relied on the job factor as his defence. He said that gas swap deals were "not administratively possible or administratively wise in the current circumstances." He did not elaborate. And he continually insisted that the remainder of the line would be built.

Between the lines

His secret opposition is almost apparent, at times, in re-reading the record. At one point during the mid-July debate, for example, he insisted that the seven year permits were all that would be issued: "Nobody, but nobody, should expect that if the pre-build were to be approved, there would be more (Canadian) gas flowing through that pre-build after the expiry of the permit."

At another point, he warned that the National Energy Board would carefully scrutinize all requests for natural gas export permits. Then he added, pointedly, that "the government itself must be convinced that the energy board is right" — a clear warning that he would not blithely issue more permits merely because the pipeline was in place.

It was as close as he came to baring his inner feelings.

Insular provinces

Are we Canadians or insular provincialists? Time is of the essence, as we ponder the "warning" (Premier Bennett's quoted words!) to British Columbians to rally to his call of 'anti-Ottawa'. Is it an election or does he address the democracy with such a treacherous word? By a majority we recently elected a government — to govern.

Does Premier Bennett expect British Columbians to take part in the erosion and fragmentation of our enviable country?

It would seem that the premier in collusion with Mr. Lougheed are intent upon holding the government of Canada in contempt and at a time crucial to our unity. Loyal Canadians will have been shocked at the outpourings of the premier of this province. — Kathleen M. Worthington-Lake, 796 Hampshire Road.

Senior citizens

We are a group of senior citizens who are very grateful to the tax payers for the beautiful centre that was built for senior citizens of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin. We feel as responsible citizens that it is our duty to keep the operating costs of the centre to a minumum.

Since the opening of the building three years ago we have organized our own programs and appointed committees from the membership to co-ordinate the various functions that are carried on at the centre. We have a variety of classes that the members can participate in at no cost to the members nor the commission. All classes are taught by members on a voluntary basis.

In my 19 months as president I have felt that we had a very active and happy group of senior citizens, who were interested in each other and were at all times doing their best to get other seniors in the area to come and join us.

However, Howard Drummond, Doug Ruttan and Co. have decided that we are not capable of operating in a manner that is beneficial to all seniors in the area. On Jan. 2 we were informed that a co-ordinator had been hired and would take over. This was done with no prior consultation with our executive and we were told by Mr. Drummond that we could like it or lump it, or words to that effect. We understand that the co-orinator was hired at a figure of $17,000 per year and the first duty that she performed was to acquire a receptionist at a figure of $11,000 per year. This was very disturbing to us as we realized that this combined figure of $28,000 per year was going to be an expense against the senior citizens that would have to be paid by the local taxpayer. We felt that this was an unnecessary expense as all of our programs were going well and we were getting ready to expand to other programs as the need arose.

His suggestion was that they had to take over because he had complaints from senior citizens that they were not made welcome and were made to feel uncomfortable at the centre. I asked him to produce some evidence that this had happened and we would do everything in our power to correct this matter. As of this date we have had no evidence of Mr. Drummond's statement.

We again say that all senior citizens are welcome at the centre and we do everything we possibly can to make things enjoyable for them.

The board has now decided to delete the word citizen from our title "Juan de Fuca Senior Citizens." Mr. Drummond and Co. are overstepping their authority as public servants to make a decision of this kind without prior consultation with the senior citizens. Mr. Drummond says that a percentage of people in the western community are not naturalized Canadians, so the name citizen should not be used. As far as we are concerned a senior citizen is a senior citizen regardless of whether they have citizenship papers or not. The only proof that we ask for them to qualify as senior citizens is proof of age.

Our question to the commission which has still not been answered but has created all of this fuss was "Please justify to us the expenditure of $28,000 per year that we feel is not fair to the tax payers of the three Communities as we have our activities well in hand through the efforts of the members." — Harry Jones, President, Juan de Fuca Senior Citizens.

Barren wasteland

What a nation of short-sighted appeasers Canada is becoming! Whales are nothing against trade. Do not politicians read anything but accountancy columns? For thousands of years the world has been gradually denuded of its forests and world animals, but this 'enlighted' age has really speeded up the process!

Who will it profit, when the world has become a barren wasteland? — G. Jones, 1298 Dallas Road.

Except in sport, competition not part of Soviet life

By CRAIG R. WHITNEY
New York Times

Pressure ends in the classroom

MOSCOW — With only 80 countries competing in the Olympic Games, there's not much suspense about who will win most of the medals. The Soviet Union, which has a monolithic system of sports schools, clubs and institutes to turn out its professional amateurs, will outclass all less-organized opponents, and only countries like East Germany, which have copied the system, have a chance of even coming close.

But surprisingly, since it works so well, sport is one of the few areas of life where competition has important influence on results, advancement and careers. For most Russians, the pressure of competition ends when they finish school. The race to get into institutes and universities that are the key to higher social status and privilege is fiercely contested. There are 18 applicants for every opening in Lomonosov University in Moscow or Zhdanov University in Leningrad. Even less prestigious institutes are hard to get into, with strict examination requirements. Education frees a student from a life of drudgery on the ravaged Russian farms or the stultification of the assembly line, and the young flock to it — more than five million students in the last academic year.

But after graduation, few people have to worry about a job, since unemployment theoretically does not exist. Career and social advancement, for all but those on the dangerous pinnacle of the Communist Party leadership, becomes dependent not on high performance so much as on conformity, on "blat" (pull), and on membership in such right-thinking institutions as the Komsomol youth league or the Communist Party (now swollen to more than 17 million members in a country of 264 million people.)

The second half of the Marxist principle "from each according to ability, to each according to need" has been amended to read "to each according to his work." This is still inimical to the law of the jungle but, even in its imperfect Russian realization, the idea has its costs. The Soviet economy is in a parlous state largely because central planners never found a replacement for the stimulus of competition in the marketplace as a guarantee of high performance.

The promise of higher wages is no stimulus. Russians compete — hard — for scarce consumer goods, but not for rubles, which are plentiful but not good for much in poorly supplied stores. Anyone who has seen Soviet consumers fighting for a shipment of bananas or foreign shoes will recognize the abundant competitive instinct channeled into wasteful activities.

Many Russians spend the equivalent of one working day per week elbowing to the head of lines, not all of it on their own time. So obsessive has the search become, philologists complain, that the Russian word for "getting" has largely supplanted "buying." You don't just buy something, you achieve it after a crafty struggle. The authorities call this "veshchism" ("thing-ism") and try to discourage it, partly by levelling incomes. Wage differentials have been reduced until, in 1975, according to the American scholar Jerry F. Hough of Duke University, the top 10 per cent of Soviet workers and employees earned only 2.9 times as much as the bottom 10 per cent. In Communist terms, this is a healthy social achievement.

But it is also an economic liability. As the party newspaper Pravda said, "the difference between the wages of a lazybones who just puts in his time and an outstanding worker who puts his heart into his work is not very great at present. It is hardly surprising," Pravda wrote, "that unsatisfactory workers don't try very hard to raise their labor productivity to the level of the best ones."

The article produced a flood of concurring letters. "In any factory," said one, "there are thousands of people; and dozens of divisions. Half the divisions overfulfill the plan, the other half fail to make it. But the result for the factory as a whole is 101 per cent of planned production, so everybody gets a bonus, from the director to the cleaning lady. Why?"

Such situations undermine the principle of "socialist competition" at the factory — artificially created contests to see who can overfulfill the plan first. A long article in Pravda last week conceded that it was difficult to make this sort of competition work. If one part of the assembly line overfulfills its plan, that fouls up the work of the rest unless they do too. Something is needed, Pravda said, to get workers to compete to produce better, not necessarily more.

These competitions have a hollow ring. In every Soviet city "honor rolls" show the month's best workers, looking like aged high school seniors posing for a yearbook. At ritualistic conferences, workers are berated for their failures and urged to do better — but they laugh at these "letuchki," or "flying meetings." Workers pledge improved results for artificial reasons, in honor of the Olympics or next February's 26th Party Congress. Taxi drivers in Riga, Soviet Latvia, have pledged to fulfill their five-year plan goal by Aug. 15 and save 500 liters of gasoline "for the Congress."

In the professions, more meaningful competition survives. Hairdressers compete for trips to Eastern Europe or the right to buy a car without waiting for years. Railway construction engineers on the Baikal-Amur mainline in Siberia competed for trips to the Olympics. Musicians and actors vie for titles. "People's Artist," a higher rank than "Merited Artist," guarantees higher fees and better engagements. Lenin Prizes and other awards recognize academic achivements. Membership in the Soviet Academy of Sciences is regarded as a signal honor and brings privileges including a high salary, a chauffeured limousine to academy meetings and a spacious apartment in Moscow.

Even greater privileges accrue to the leadership elite, and its membership guards them jeaously. Hough calculated that 90 per cent of the Communist Party Central Committee re-elected itself in 1976, which put quite a damper on competition from younger party secretaries and functionaries waiting to move up. The average age of the Politburo is now well over 70, but Leonid I. Brezhnev, who is 73 years old, and his ailing septuagenarian colleague, Aleksei N. Kosygin, give every sign of being prepared to accept new five-year mandates at the Party Congress in February. In the Soviet Union, competition does not necessarily produce survival of the fittest.

Metric madness

TORONTO STAR

If conversion to metric measurement in the retail grocery sector goes ahead as planned, by Jan. 1, 1981, grocery stores in 21 cities across the nation will display meat and produce prices in dollars per kilo and gram, instead of dollars per pound and ounce. The baffled consumer will once again be scratching his head in an effort to figure out how to get value for his money.

Although the argument can be made that metrication is valuable in export sales to other nations using the metric system, the benefit of forcing the average consumer to buy his beef-steak and bananas in metric measurement has yet to be demonstrated. At best it's a frustrating inconvenience, and since the Metric Commission will be spending millions of dollars on implementation, the taxpayer shells out the price of his own annoyance.

Since public antipathy to the system has been clearly demonstrated in three pilot project cities, pressing ahead with retail grocery metrication would also be a fine example of the governmental principle of ignore and conquer.

In Peterborough — considered so typical of public attitudes that it's used widely as a test market for all kinds of products — consumers preferred to drive miles out of their way to shop in stores that offered groceries in pounds and ounces. Some 7,000 people there signed a petition to Parliament telling their legislators emphatically that they did not want, and would not accept, metrication in local grocery stores. Reaction in the other two test centres of Sherbrooke, Quebec, and Kamloops, B.C., was similar, ranging from confused anger to disgruntled resignation.

Conversion to metric scales is also costly for retailers; that's an additional overhead cost that will inevitably be passed on to customers.

All this discombobulation might be worthwhile if getting to know your neighborhood kilogram had any significant benefit for Canada, or Canadian consumers — benefit that would outweigh the cost, time and effort involved in conversion.

The apparent lack of such benefit ranks metric conversion for fresh meat and produce as low on the scale of usefulness as weather forecasts in celsius and kilopascals, and metric cookbooks.

It's an idea cabinet should abandon — or at least postpone until and unless someone comes up with a compelling reason for such an expensive and bothersome business.

The prostitution solution

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

QUEBEC — Mayor Jean Drapeau and Montreal are making themselves look ridiculous or worse with their current campaign against prostitution. Have they no sense of proportion? Where are their democratic principles?

Prostitution is a good cause with few champions, and Mayor Drapeau is certainly not among them. He first achieved fame as a crime-buster in the forties, swooping down in the night on houses specializing in gambling and sex.

Recently, when Montreal's prostitutes staged a demonstration against the city's Regulation 5464, which forbids being in a public place for the purpose of prostitution, the news media published photos of the irate women rather as if the whole thing were a joke. Fortunately, La Presse is currently running a series of articles on prostitution in Montreal that gives the subject the serious treatment it deserves.

Without waiting for the series to end, I'm willing to give my advice on what Mayor Drapeau and Justice Minister Jean Chretien should do about prostitution.

In the first place, Montreal should set aside — as Amsterdam does — a district specifically devoted to prostitution and other forms of commercial sex. It would be good for tourism and help protect women walking in other parts of the city from insults.

This means, of course, that prostitution should be made legal. And why not? St. Augustine of Hippo, one of the luminaries of the Church, thought legal prostitution necessary to prevent rapes and public disorders. I agree totally with the author of the Confessions. And I think women, considered by many to be degraded by prostitution, would be less degraded if it were legal and regulated.

Prostitution is illegal, not really for reasons of state, but for reasons of morality. Our puritanism, incompatible with a political philosophy based on liberalism, demands that prostitutes be persecuted. To be consistent, we might consider stoning adulterers or beheading them as the law of Saudi Arabia recommends.

I see only drawbacks in our current attitude. Although never a client of a prostitute, I will defend to the last breath the right of someone who wants to pay for sexual pleasure to do so, and the right of someone who is willing to provide it. It is neither the concern of the state to prohibit it, nor the business of the community to intervene in other people's affairs.

But since our Canadian community is too unenlightened to decriminalize prostitution, I'll take people at their word and help them really, but really eliminate it.

We go about it the wrong way. We fine the women, who simply return immediately to the street and work harder to earn money to pay their fines. What is the use? Most women who walk the street as prostitutes have no reputation to lose and are not deterred by a fine.

So let's be logical. At present, the client of the prostitute is almost always ignored. It's the woman who bears the odium and who is the object of police pursuit.

Let's reverse that. The only reason there is prostitution is that there are men offering money for sexual services. That is the root of the transaction. In all my life I have been accosted only twice by prostitutes. But time and again, I have seen men solicit women, taunt and insult women who were not prostitutes.

Let's leave the prostitutes alone. No fines, no pursuit. Let's go after the men. After all, there are almost no transactions that begin with a woman seducing a man. The men go out in search of women. They call a number. They drive past.

So let's outlaw all sexual taunts addressed by men to women. If an act of prostitution takes place, fine the man and publish his name and possibly his picture in the paper. There is no gain in learning that Lola was fined once again for walking the streets. But it is interesting that it was Judge So-and-So or Mayor Jones or Businessman Smith who accosted a woman for sexual purposes.

Not a week goes by that I don't see a woman insulted in the street by a man she doesn't know. That, in my judgment, is a far more serious problem than prostitution. If we go after the male end of sexual solicitation, not only will we really cut down on prostitution, men will start being more careful about gratuitously insulting women — any and all women.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

There is a standing joke in the birding fraternity to the effect that most books on birds are out of date before their first editions hit the shelves of the book shops. This seeming contradiction results from the fact that we learn new things about birds faster than we can get what we learn into print. This is why, five or six years after they were changed, many of our bird books still carry the old names of many kinds of our birds.

There are many forces at work in this continuous rewriting of the book on birds. Not the least of these — to my way of thinking — are scientific and cultural. And, as of now, in one respect at least these two forces seem to be pulling in opposite directions.

Science is led by that august body, the American Ornithologists' Union (AOU). Thanks to reports of a committee of the AOU released early in the '70's, birders of this continent have been suffering an extended case of the "listing jitters."

The listing jitters manifest themselves in a peculiar inability of the patient to come to grips with new names for old birds and, worst of all, to survive the loss of some long-time friends among the birds. Both these affect the birder's Life List — that all-important record every birder keeps of the kinds of birds he or she has seen in his or her life.

In their reshuffle of "the book", the AOU wiped out nearly 20 species, previously considered bona fide, some simply by lumping them with other species. Therefore, the AOU represents a force for the reduction of the number of kinds of birds found on this continent.

Pulling in the other direction — to increase the number of kinds of birds found in North America — is a well-known facet of North American culture: our propensity for keeping pets. If you doubt the power of pets, drop by the pet food section of any supermarket.

But, you ask (I hope), what has keeping pets to do with the record on North American birds?

Well, I'm glad you did ask because it affects the record significantly, and Richard Bryan, in an article in Birding, shows how, and by how much.

According to Bryan, the "how" can be laid at the feet of importers who, legally or otherwise, bring exotic birds into the country for sale to pet lovers. Many of these birds, accidentally or otherwise, escape, and a few survive to become bona fide birds of America.

The problem is most acute in the southern U.S., where salubrious climates allow tropical exotics to survive and sometimes prosper.

The "how much" can be found in about two dozen kinds of these "foreigners" which are now well established in many parts of the continent. Among the best known of these are the Monk Parakeet and the Budgerigar — both from Australia.

Monk Parakeets are now firmly entrenched in southeastern Florida. But New York and New Jersey, states not noted for mild winters, have their resident Monk Parakeets too. Even in the Northwest — Portland, to be exact — there is a small band trying to establish a bridgehead, so far with little success.

And wherever the parakeets have dug in, they've become a problem, to the extent that control measures have already been implemented in some states to protect crops.

The Budgerigar — Budgie to most of us — ranks as one of, if not the most popular, cage-birds on the continent. But as a "wild" bird, it is also beginning to establish another reputation — not quite so shining as its reputation as a pet. Bred in aviaries by the thousands for many generations, these little stars of the "Out Back" have become acclimatized to the more temperate parts of the United States to the point that today they can be found by the thousands, wild, in Florida.

These are only two of the additions to North America's fauna that can be credited to culture, but they reveal that while the scientists cut, culture adds — for better or worse.

Denticare: good and bad

The province's largest private dental insurer, CU&C Health Service Society, has good and bad words for the government's new denticare scheme.

The non-profit society is pleased the government has agreed to provide assistance to those who are also covered by private plans, says CU&C general manager David Schreck.

He said this was one of the main points in a brief presented to the government by the society last spring.

However CU&C is concerned that current dental utilization patterns indicate low-income people are less likely to use dental services, regardless of the cost to them, than higher-income people.

Schreck said a dental plan can have the effect of transferring income from low to high-income groups because of this pattern.

To prevent that, Schreck said, the government should put dental services in schools where all students would have easy access.

"We're disappointed they didn't do anything about school-based clinics but used the dental model," said Schreck.

The society would also like the government to encourage more use of paradental services.

Earlier the society had begun legal action against the College of Dental Surgeons for a fee schedule the college supplied to dentists.

But following the disclosure of a fee schedule worked out between the government and the college the society has withdrawn the action.

B.C. supports oil price hike by Alberta

The B.C. government has endorsed the Alberta government's decision to impose a $2-a-barrel increase in the price of oil.

Premier Bill Bennett termed the increase responsible and said: "The B.C. position has been in favor of responsible increases so we can develop energy self-sufficiency and end the facetious pricing which has made us more dependent than ever on imported oil."

Energy Minister Bob McClelland said Wednesday that without a series of orderly price increases, Canadians would be upset when a huge increase is forced upon them later.

Project Engineer Mechanical

For the engineering department of our Elk Falls pulp and paper complex located near Campbell River. This modern facility manufactures newsprint, bleached kraft pulp, kraft specialty papers and lumber.

The project engineer reports to the mill engineering supervisor and is closely associated with management, production and maintenance personnel. Contact is also necessary with contractors and suppliers. Projects will involve estimating, approval of working drawings for new or replacement equipment, process control instrumentation and other projects within the complex.

A graduate in mechanical engineering will probably be best qualified, however, an electrical engineer may have a background well suited for the position. Applicants must have two years project engineering in pulp and paper or other appropriate industries such as oil or mining. Relocation assistance is available.

Bus passes big success

The Capital Regional District's recently-introduced daily bus pass system is a big success, a spokesman for the Urban Transit Authority said Thursday.

Dennis Grimmer said a total of 4,103 passes was purchased in the first week of the scheme which allows purchase of passes for unlimited trips within the urban area. A total of 7,795 passes was sold last week, a 52-per-cent increase since June 9, Grimmer said.

Passes are being bought by tourists as well as children, senior citizens "and I suspect commuters as well."

He said the pass is a boon to senior citizens who could travel all over for 35 cents, a nickel more than they would ordinarily pay for a round trip.

Grimmer hopes monthly passes will be available by the end of the year.

The UTA has also asked the CRD to study a corporate bus pass system under which employers could buy passes for employees on an annual basis.

Grimmer said such a system works well in Seattle with more than 100 employers participating.

Unity group grant vetoed

City council Thursday shot down a plea from the People to People petition for Canadian unity for a cash grant to assist the organization which mounted a massive name-gathering drive to save Confederation.

Ald. Bill McElroy said the scheme was a piece of Liberal flackery and didn't deserve the $200 reluctantly voted last week by the finance committee.

It failed to get the necessary two-thirds majority required for a grant.

Victoria claims the organization already owes it $1,000 for travel expenses for Mayor Bill Tindal, who went to Quebec in the spring with a large delegation to present the hundreds of thousands of names.

Victoria paid for Tindall's trip after promises from People to People it would be reimbursed, but now the organization — headed by Liberal Sen. Keith Cowan — has pleaded poverty.

Parking protests block building

Protests of residents and business competitors about insufficient parking led city council to reject an application to rezone the corner of Fort and Ashgrove for medical offices.

Ald. Frank Carson said it was time to draw the line and settle the parking problems of the neighborhood around Royal Jubilee Hospital before allowing any more medical office buildings.

"I know the area well — it's a mess," said Carson.

Council voted 5-3 to reject the application and to refer the parking problems to its traffic committee.

David McHaffie, speaking for his mother and two other women who live on the street, said there is a residents-only parking limitation in force but Victoria police only sporadically patrol the area. They have more pressing priorities, residents are told, he said.

"They're parking in the driveway. They've got cars parked up against our fence, which has been knocked down three times," said Hugh McKenzie, who lives behind the development site.

A spokesman for Fort Royal medical building at the corner of Fort and Richmond said the new project with its 20 underground parking slots was an excessive parking density.

Derelict house ordered repaired

A derelict heritage house at 1121 Pandora must be repaired under an order approved Thursday night by Victoria city council.

Aldermen told the city solicitor to prepare an order under section 936 of the Municipal Act, which empowers a municipality to enforce the demolition or repair of buildings which are so dilapidated or unclean as to be a public nuisance.

The two-storey 1885 house is in poor condition.

In January, a spokesman for owner Morguard Properties Ltd. said the house is a danger to life and limb and had been badly vandalized. Most of the windows are missing and the plumbing has been stripped.

Vic Parker said Morguard opposed heritage designation, but council went ahead anyway and added it to the 80 homes protected by designation and which may not be demolished.

Sewage in a mess, rival MLAs agree

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers and Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson agree on at least one thing — something must be done to correct Victoria's sewage disposal problems.

Hanson Thursday asked Rogers to demand funds from Finance Minister Hugh Curtis to improve the condition of the beaches and water surrounding Victoria.

Rogers agreed a problem exists and something must be done but said: "There are no easy solutions."

Hanson called for secondary treatment facilities for the numerous outfalls here.

"The Sewerage Facilities Assistance Act allows the province to fund such facilities and it's critically important to start now. The outfall system for the disposal of wastes has proven this summer to be an environmental disaster," he said.

A number of beaches have been posted by the Capital Regional District this summer because fecal coliform counts are greater than safe levels and reports are common of particles of human waste floating from outfalls back to beaches.

"The outfall system is the most antiquated method in the world of disposing of domestic sewage," Hanson said.

"Incredibly, however, we are actually contemplating more funds for the dozen or so major outfalls that have been built from Pedder Bay all the way around the coast line to Sidney. What's worse, the major lines like Macaulay Point and Clover Point are not yet up to full volume. Clover Point, for instance, has a capacity for 13.8 million gallons of sewage and it is using only half of that."

He acknowledged correcting the problem will cost money but said compared with huge projects like B.C. Place and Transpo '86, an estimate of $60 million for a secondary treatment plant is miniscule.

"Moreover, monuments have nothing to do with the quality of life," the NDP MLA said.

Hippie haven?

Several public agencies have been instructed by Mayor Bill Tindall to investigate a house on Southgate Street after numerous complaints from neighbors about the unkempt condition of the property.

"It's a hippie commune," said David D. Miller of 1070 Southgate.

"Firewood is piled on the front lawn. The garbage container is always kept in the front because of the overgrowth."

The mayor told Miller he had asked the city public works and parks departments to look into the situation as well as the SPCA and the Capital Regional District health officer.

Before the judge

The last chapter in a cross-country cheque writing binge between February and September last year ended in Victoria provincial court Thursday when a Victoria couple pleaded guilty to 18 charges.

They were the last of the charges against Mary Joan Popeil, 26, and Andrew Stephen Loft, 31 who were sentenced June 20 after pleading guilty to most of 215 forgery-related charges involving about $10,000, most of which originated in Victoria, Vancouver, Calgary, Saskatoon and Winnipeg.

Loft was sentenced then to one year and Popeil received six months.

The recent charges, all originating in Windsor, mostly involved writing cheques on accounts they had opened in the name of phoney businesses.

In one instance Popeil showed up in a white smock emblazoned with the name of one of "their" businesses, a bakery, when she cashed a "paycheque." In all, the couple got access to about $2,400.

Judge Lorne Pearce described the Windsor activities as a well planned scheme.

Pearce, noting his leniency in his June sentencing, said he could hardly alter course now in sentencing the couple. Both were sentenced to six months concurrent to their existing sentences along with two years probation to make restitution.

A 26-year-old man was jailed 30 days after pleading guilty to three charges involving a June 30 collision with a parked vehicle.

Brion Jacobson, 841 Hillside, was sentenced to 30 days each for charges of impaired driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident. He was fined $50 for driving without a licence.

Ostler gave a suspended sentence to a 19-year-old Edmonton man who admitted using a stolen credit card.

Cornelus Peterson attempted to buy a tent and backpack Wednesday at a downtown department store.

He said his tent, backpack and personal effects had been stolen from the bus depot and he was without so much as a change of clothing. His requests for assistance had been turned down repeatedly by social agencies.

"I was kind of desperate," he said.

Judgment reserved on Tillicum

Protracted litigation over the size of the proposed Tillicum shopping centre in Saanich ended in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday with final submissions by lawyers for the municipality and Capital Regional District.

Mr. Justice John Bouck reserved judgment which is not expected to be handed down in written form for at least a month.

Saanich is asking Bouck to set aside an interim injunction obtained by the CRD halting expansion of the project at Burnside and Tillicum to 495,000 square feet.

A covenant had restricted the size to 295,000 square feet but this was removed by Saanich council by means of a bylaw.

Bouck, interjecting several comments into rebuttal argument by CRD lawyer Donald Farquhar, said he has to ascertain if there is substantial or minor impairment of the regional plan.

Farquhar told him the development is clearly of regional significance of the kind envisaged by the Municipal Act which spoke of what might impede the objectives of the regional plan.

But Bouck said the problem he has with that argument is that the regional plan designates the former Tillicum Drive-In Theatre site as a regional centre.

Farquhar said the CRD contends the development does impede the regional plan because of its effect on the Western Community and whether or not the Tillicum centre is needed at this time.

Bouck said he has to decide what the CRD intended when it passed the regional plan bylaw and asked where in that bylaw did the CRD indicate it did not mean a shopping centre of 495,000 square feet. He pointed out the bylaw referred to a minimum size of 175,000 square feet.

Farquhar said the CRD made Tillicum a regional shopping centre in return for a limit of 295,000 square feet and the plan could not be looked at in isolation from an agreement to that size.

He said Saanich council committed itself to limit the size of the centre by a resolution, but agreed that did not appear in the regional bylaw.

Bouck asked whether he could "go behind the face of the bylaw" and Farquhar replied that Saanich council, its planner and citizens at the public hearing which rezoned the site believed the development would be limited to 295,000 square feet.

30-day sentence for robbery

David Paul Jussila, 24, was sentenced in county court Thursday to 30 days in jail for robbery with violence against John McNair, 29, involving $68 in an incident during a beer-drinking party on a beach below Dallas Road early May 7.

Jussila pleaded guilty and co-defendant Daryl William Taylor, 28, was found not guilty by Judge E.J.C. Stewart after a two-day trial.

Stewart noted Jussila spent three months in custody, equivalent to a sentence of five or six months. Because of that — but to emphasize the seriousness of the offence — he was imposing a further 30 days.

He said Jussila, Taylor and McNair were an odd assortment of people who had spent the previous day drinking in Vancouver and Victoria.

He had no doubt it was a deliberate robbery but he had trouble deciding when the decision to rob was made and what part Jussila played in it.

If it was planned for a considerable length of time, Stewart said he would treat the offence differently.

Built in 1928 by Victoria's legendary architect, Frances Rattenbury, this impressive and exceptionally well-planned residence embodies the utmost in gracious living, and full facilities for lavish entertaining. The entrance foyer with cloakroom lead to a 27-ft. grand entrance hall, which in turn opens onto all main rooms. The living room is 38 ft. by 18 ft. with exquisite views. The dining room is 18x14 with adjoining conservatory and stainless steel butler's pantry. There is also a separate office/sunroom plus a panelled den with fireplace and wet bar. The kitchen is crisp and modern with built-in oven and Jenn-air range and a sunny breakfast room. Upstairs are 5 bedrooms, all ensuite, including a spectacular master suite with fireplace, balcony and large dressing room. Behind the double garage is an added bonus, a completely separate and self-contained suite for staff, in-laws or whatever. Rarely does a property of this calibre become available. If you have been looking for something very special don't miss this opportunity. For further details on this new exclusive listing, contact

MacBlo starts plant in Alabama

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced Monday construction will begin next year on a $274-million expansion of its forest products manufacturing complex at Pine Hill, Ala.

The plan will include a new mill to produce 190,000 tonnes a year of corrugated paper as well as machine changes to increase linerboard production to 404,000 tonnes a year from 50,000 tonnes.

The expansion is part of a $2-billion capital spending program for 1981 to 1985. About $1.2 billion is being invested in British Columbia.

Calvert Knudsen, company chairman and chief executive officer, said the new mill will make use of Alabama's extensive hardwood stands and pine now used at the plant. The company will also recycle corrugated containers to make up 25 per cent of the mill's raw material supply.

Exxon dividend

Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, reports it is raising its quarterly common stock dividend 10 cents to $1.30 a share in its fifth consecutive quarterly dividend increase.

Exxon, which announced earlier that its second-quarter earnings rose 21.1 per cent from a year ago to $1.03 billion, said the third-quarter's dividend will be payable Sept. 10 to shareholders of record on Aug. 13.

The company's dividend has risen steadily since the second quarter of 1979, when it stood at 90 cents a share.

New York Times

Higher earnings from newsprint operations and from The New York Times newspaper helped increase second-quarter earnings 17 per cent from last year's quarter to $11 million, The New York Times Co. has reported.

The diversified publishing and broadcast company reported an eight per cent year-to-year decline in operating earnings from its magazine group.

Overall earnings, which were a record for the quarter, compared with $9.4 million in the 1979 period, the previous record for the quarter.

Earnings a share were 92 cents compared with 80 cents a share a year earlier.

Revenues came to $187.8 million in the latest reporting period, up from $165.8 million a year earlier.

Earnings from equity in associated companies, which include four paper mills and the International Herald Tribune, rose 39 per cent, and operating earnings from The New York Times newspaper were 18 per cent higher in the second quarter, the report said.

Company reports

CanCel

Canadian Cellulose reported second quarter earnings of $5.3 million or .44 a share compared with $4 million or .33 a share in the same period last year.

Net sales for the quarter were $86.4 million compared with $65.7 million in the second quarter of 1979, CanCel president Donald Watson said in a news release.

That brings earnings for the first six months of 1980 to $9.4 million or .77 a share compared with $6.7 million or .55 cents a share in 1979 and boosts net sales to $165 million compared with $120.8 million.

Watson said higher prices, continued demand for kraft pulp and foreign exchange benefits offset the impact on earnings of a weak lumber market.

CanCel directors approved a third quarter dividend of .08 a share to be paid Sept. 22 to shareholders of record Sept. 5.

Melcor

Melcor Developments Ltd. has announced net earnings of $2,601,000 or 93 cents a share for the six months ended June 30, 1980. Earnings for the same period last year were $1,416,000 or 51 cents a share.

Gross revenue increased to $20,997,000 in 1980 from $12,581,000 in 1979.

Stelco

The Steel Company of Canada, Ltd. of Toronto has reported that profit for the six months ended June 30 declined slightly over the same period a year earlier because of a drop in demand for steel products.

Profit was $75.5 million or $2.51 a share in the first half, compared with $75.89 million or $2.79 a share in the first half of 1979.

Stelco said revenue was up slightly to $1.097 billion from $1.049 billion.

BCRIC

British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. reports consolidated net earnings of $15 million on total revenues of $113.6 million dollars for the second quarter of 1980.

During the corresponding period last year, the corporation earned $8.1 million on revenues of $84 million.

Company president David Helliwell said net earnings for the first six months of 1980 were $28.5 million on total revenues of $224 million, compared with earnings of $14.2 million dollars on revenues of $156.6 million in the first half of 1979.

Helliwell said these financial results are not directly comparable because the funds from the corporation's public share issue were not received and invested until June 1979.

Weldwood

Weldwood of Canada Ltd. reported net income for the first six months of 1980 fell to $6.9 million on net sales of $236.8 million from net income of $21.6 million on sales of $270.8 million in the same period last year.

The company blamed the drop on depressed levels of housing starts in the United States and Canada wheich caused a low market demand for plywood and waferboard.

Canada's trade surplus doubles to $3.1 billion

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's exports of manufactured and other goods exceeded imports by $892 million in June, Statistics Canada reported today.

The surplus, up from $313 million in May, means the trade surplus for the first six months of this year is more than double that of 1979: $3.1 billion compared with $1.4 billion.

Increased exports of wheat, oil, natural gas and coal, fertilizers and woodpulp accounted for the 3.6 per cent increase in sales abroad to $5.97 billion in June, following a seven per cent drop a month earlier.

Declining demand for car parts and imported oil meant imports dropped two per cent to $5.08 billion, following an 18.6 per cent decrease in May.

These figures are adjusted to take into account seasonal variations.

Exports of natural resources, which account for 22 per cent of domestic sales abroad, rose 15 per cent in June, recovering from an 18.5-per-cent drop a month earlier.

Natural gas exports increased 11 per cent to $325 million, following a drop of 17 per cent in May. Crude oil increased 10 per cent to $285 million and asbestos exports were up a whopping 90 per cent to $70 million.

Sales of petroleum and coal products more than doubled to $225 million and fertilizer sales increased 131 per cent to $150 million.

Non-ferrous metals were up 11 per cent to $425 million, while iron and steel exports decreased 14 per cent to $130 million.

A 79-per-cent increase in wheat sales — worth $475 million in June — led a 41-per-cent increase in sales of food, feed, beverage and tobacco, which as a group account for 10 per cent of Canadian exports.

Foreign demand for Canadian-made cars, trucks and other motor vehicles continued a 16-month slump with a four-per-cent drop in June exports.

Sales of Canadian passengers cars abroad were down 4.3 per cent to $305 million, with sales of trucks and other vehicles down 7.5 per cent to $155 million.

However, Canadian imports of foreign cars, worth $400 million in June, and trucks and other vehicles, $145 million combined, increased 20 per cent. This was offset by a drop of 21 per cent in imports of vehicle parts, to $485 million.

A drop of 17 per cent, or $85 million, in oil imports resulted in a 13-per-cent decline in imports of all raw natural resources.

Coal imports fell 45 per cent to $45 million, following a 51-per-cent increase in May.

However, imports of processed petroleum and coal products were up 56 per cent to $70 million after a drop of 53 per cent in May.

Imports of non-ferrous metals increased 53 per cent to $250 million and iron and steel imports increased 19 per cent to $135 million.

Following two months of slumping sales abroad, Canada increased sales in June to all major trading partners except a few European countries.

Exports to the United States, Canada's most important trading partner, increased five per cent to $3.67 billion. This followed three months of decline caused by the U.S. recession.

Importers in the United Kingdom increased their purchases of Canadian goods by 31 per cent to $285 million.

Sales to Japan increased by 35 per cent to $415 million. At the same time Canadians bought 24 per cent more Japanese goods, worth $240 million.

Domestic sales of goods from the U.S. dropped 1.3 per cent to $3.69 billion.

Revised figures reported today also show the trade deficit in April, earlier estimated at $48 million, was actually $173 million. April was the only month this year in which there was a deficit.

Banks twitchy over oil fight

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

CALGARY (CP) — An already-worried banking community is getting increasingly twitchy as it watches Canadian governments continue to squabble over oil revenues.

Like the petroleum industry itself, the bankers know the economic devastation that could result from a repeat of the 1974 federal-provincial war, a war in which governments competed to see which could pile the most crippling taxes on the industry.

But even if that doomsday clash is avoided, the bankers see other major threats that governments seem to be ignoring in their quest for petrodollars.

The problem is basically where to get the staggering sums of money needed for energy development, major bank spokesmen said in recent speeches.

With time running out for Canadian hopes of oil self-sufficiency by 1990, the bankers warned neither governments nor society have begun to face the hard realities involved in energy development.

Those realities, they said, demand more than just sharp price increases — also needed are less squeamishness about foreign investment plus special tax and royalty measures to encourage energy projects.

In their campaign to awaken a complacent public, the bankers have resorted to some rather uncharacteristic language.

"It is a crazy delusion to think that we have a choice between cheap oil and expensive oil," chairman Fred McNeil of the Bank of Montreal declared in a recent speech.

The choice, he said, is whether to have secure oil supplies or to gamble Canada's economic future on the whims of foreign oil exporters.

"We will spend $4 billion this year in subsidizing the quarter of our oil needs that we import — not only subsidizing over-consumption but adding to our government deficit and our balance-of-payments problem in order to do so.

"What we are not paying at the gas pump, we are obviously paying in taxes, both immediate and deferred.

"More importantly, we are now taking billions of our real wealth and transferring it to our international suppliers, though it is all completely unnecessary."

Continuing that approach will cripple the Canadian economy, Royal Bank vice-president Blake Ashforth warned in another speech.

Ashforth added, however, that Canadians must realize the cost of independence:

"The energy sector in total will need an average of $30 billion per year in the 1980s.

"To put this in perspective, the annual financing, debt and equity for the entire energy sector averaged only $6 billion annually for the past six years.

"This means a five-fold jump over the next decade."

One oil sands plant alone, he said, can absorb $8 billion in capital and take four years of construction before a single barrel of oil is produced. Meanwhile, up to 10,000 construction workers must be assembled and housed.

Realizing that many people tend to skip over such statistics with glazed eyes, Ashforth flirted with the wrath of feminists in trying to drive home the awesome meaning of just $1 billion.

"Imaging giving your wife a million dollars to spend and asking her to spend it at the rate of $1,000 a day.

"In three years she'll be back for more.

"Now give her a billion dollars and ask her to spend it at the same rate of $1,000 a day.

"You won't see her for 3,000 years."

Keeping that in mind, ponder the implications of the Royal Bank's estimate of where the $300 billion will come from: $50 billion from Canadian financial markets, $150 billion from oil industry revenues and $100 billion from foreign sources.

If you add up all loans, lines of credit and other forms of support, Ashforth said, Canadian banks collectively are currently providing the oil industry with $7 billion in financing.

To fulfil their share in 1980s financial needs, he said, banks will have to expand their capital base — "and what this means is that they will be competing for funds with the very people they are trying to help."

By 1985, he predicted, the total capital base of all Canadian banks will be $20 billion:

"If Canadian banks set a maximum commitment of 20 per cent of capital to any one project during 1985, this means a total of only $4 billion will be available from this source.

"Oil sands plants on the drawing board now will require more than twice this amount."

Similar conclusions, but moderately different figures, came from Stanley Davison, vice-chairman of the Bank of Montreal.

Davison estimated that Canadian sources could provide 75 per cent of the $300 billion to $400 billion needed for 1980s energy projects, leaving $75 billion to $100 billion to come from foreign sources.

Like Ashforth, Davison stressed the massive task ahead of Canadian banks, whose current $240 billion in assets are supported by capital of $5.7 billion.

"If this ratio is to be maintained through the '80s, and it would be desirable if it were actually higher, bank capital would have to increase on average by 10 per cent per annum or by some $9 billion through the decade — that is, by more than 1½ times the total capital of the banks at the present time."

Housing starts on road back?

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of housing starts throughout the country rose in June over May, but it is too early to tell whether this marks the beginning of a recovery in the ailing construction industry, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

New houses were being built in June at a rate of 113,800 a year in cities with a population of 10,000 or more. This compares with an annual rate of 91,800 housing starts in May and 139,000 in June, 1979.

A Statistics Canada official said it will be one or two months before a pattern begins to emerge.

People delayed buying houses when mortgage interest rates soared to 17.75 per cent this spring. Even though interest rates have falled since then, people are still putting off building houses because mortgage rates have not fallen as fast as some other bank charges, this official said.

Housing starts throughout the country, including cities and towns of all sizes and rural areas, averaged 145,500 on an annual basis in June, compared with 186,900 a year earlier.

Trading volume away up

TORONTO (CP) — Volume of trading on Canada's four major stock markets was up sharply in July from the same month a year ago, the Toronto Stock Exchange said Thursday.

Preliminary figures compiled by the exchange show trading volume and value on the Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver and Alberta markets also picked up from the month before. Figures for the Winnipeg market were not available.

At Toronto, 151.2 million shares worth $2.45 billion were traded in July. Volume was up more than 50 per cent from July, 1979, and 29 per cent from last June. Value increased by almost 100 per cent from the same month a year ago and by 35.9 per cent from June.

At Montreal, 21.3 million shares worth $284.7 million were traded in July, up 79 per cent and 61.8 per cent respectively from July, 1979. Volume in June was 15.3 million shares and value was $242.1 million.

The Vancouver market surpassed Montreal in volume but not in value last month. Almost 106 million shares valued at an estimated $204.7 million changed hands in Vancouver, compared with 86.8 million shares worth $135.4 million in July a year ago and 93.8 million shares worth $195.7 million in June, 1979.

Banks cut interest on savings

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank and the Bank of Montreal have announced they are lowering savings account interest rates.

The Royal announced it is lowering its bonus savings accounts interest rates to 9.25 per cent from 10 per cent, and its calculator daily interest account rates to 8.25 per cent from 9.25 per cent, effective today.

A bank official said the rates were expected to change following the gradual decline in prime interest rates over the last two months.

The Bank of Montreal announced it is lowering its true savings account interest rate to 9.25 per cent from 10 per cent and its daily interest savings account rate to 8.75 per cent from 9.50 per cent, effective immidiately.

Vancouver women launch mining company

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five Vancouver women have taken a giant step in the business world — forming a public mining company with an all-woman board of directors.

The company had its beginnings 18 months ago when Pat Hean, 60, was speaking with Cecil Walker, president of Nu-Energy Development Corp., at a party.

Mrs. Hean said that when she heard Nu-Energy was prepared to option some of its interest in a gold and silver mine near Atlin she was determined to form a group to buy the option and put the property, 60 kilometres south of the B.C.-Yukon border, into production.

"People thought I was mad, but thought it was a great idea to try," she said in an interview.

She contacted friends about investing in and organizing an exploration and development company.

Within six months a group had formed. The board of directors now comprises Hean, Joyce Chow, a lumber broker; Pearl Chu, co-owner of a medical laboratory; Dorothy Enridge, a retail executive, and Barbara Johnson, a design consultant.

None had a mining background.

Nu-Lady now plans a $180,000 diamond-drilling program on the property late this month.

Mrs. Hean said the current price of nearly $700 an ounce for gold, the known high-grade ore body and possible large size makes it a potentially profitable operation.

Nu-Lady was trading at $1.75 on the Vancouver Curb Exchange on Wednesday.

In the 1920s, when Engineer Gold Mines Ltd. controlled the property, the company's stock was among the highest on the New York Curb Exchange. The price of its shares reached $120 in 1926, but the property was abandoned after the 1929 crash.

The property first gained attention in 1910 when its owners reported 800 pounds of ore had yielded 240 ounces of gold.

The owners expected to put the mine into production and preliminary agreements were made with New York interests.

However, Captain James Alexander, principal owner, was drowned on his way to New York when his ship went down in the Lynn Canal off Skagway, Alaska.

But the company did leave something behind, Captain Alexander's parrot, Polly, was left at the Caribou Hotel at Carcross, Yukon, when Alexander began his ill-fated journey. Polly's intemperate behavior attracted world-wide attention until her death in 1972.

The Engineer property was first reported in 1899 by a group of White Pass and Yukon Railway Co. engineers who spotted gold in quartz veins near shore when they were rowing across the river on a railway survey.

Government reports show about 20,000 tons of ore have been raised at the property and about 21,000 ounces of gold recovered, as well as about 10,000 ounces of silver.

Pathologists fee settlement averts strike

A threatened strike by B.C. pathologists was narrowly averted today when the attorney-general ministry agreed to meet their fee demands.

The B.C. Association of Laboratory Physicians, representing the pathologists, told the government Thursday their services would be withdrawn at midnight because of delays in getting a settlement of the dispute over fees for forensic autopsies.

But association president Dr. Hugh Pontifex, a pathologist with the B.C. Cancer Institute in Vancouver, said in an interview the strike threat evaporated after deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel assured pathologists they will get the fee they sought.

Pontifex said a new fee schedule agreed to last April gave pathologists up to $150 for an forensic autopsy, double the old rate.

In addition they were entitles to an additional $20 for each microscopic section required to a maximum of $70.

B.C. Chief Coroner Dr. William McArthur said the fee schedule represented maximum amounts and some coroners, who authorize the payments for such examinations, were using their discretion in reducing the bills.

Pontifex said the amounts paid were altered in very considerable fashion, sometimes by as much as half and for no apparent reason.

Pontifex said there is still another problem that remains to be resolved — the issue of witness fees.

Pathologists now receive only $7 for appearing as a witness at a coroner's court. Other witnesses get $6, except expert witnesses who are paid up to $60 an hour, including waiting time.

Psychologists spurn fee offer

Consulting psychologists have rejected the provincial government's latest fee offer and say it's completely out of line.

Vancouver psychologist Dr. Diana Mitchell, who heads a committee appointed by the B.C. Psychological Association to deal with fee issue, said today an all-day meeting with Government Employee Relations Bureau officials ended in an impasse on Wednesday.

"While the talks were very positive, the offer was completely unsatisfactory, many many dollars below the break-even point for private practitioners who have the upkeep of an office and staff. We;re still far apart," she said.

She said the psychologists had been offered $125 for 3½-hour sessions at Wednesday's meeting.

Psychologists normally charge $40 to $75 per hour in private practice.

Up until March they had been getting $120 per 3½ hour session when used as consultants by the B.C. Corrections Branch, the health ministry and human resources ministry.

This was sliced to $60 in March.

Mitchell said for ethical reasons, psychologists are working in emergency situations for the attorney-general's department but are refusing to take pay because the fee structure does not recognize the significance of their services.

She said potential crises remain because they are not working on a consistent basis.

She cited an example: "Two days ago on Vancouver Island a teenager broke and entered the same house three times and the last time held one of the family at knife point. He's a very dangerous child. Had he had consistent counselling this may not have happened. It's a fluke the situation stopped from being worse."

Mitchell said a further meeting with GERB is scheduled for Aug. 18 but because of the urgency, the committee wants to meet on Aug. 11.

CFRE group to protest CBC sale

The CFRE Public Broadcasting Society is organizing a public demonstration to protest the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's plans to sell its vacant Victoria building.

Society treasurer John Elliot said today the CBC has apparently rejected its request to delay until April of next year the sale of the building at Blanshard and Kings.

CFRE wants time to generate public support and raise enough money to purchase the building for B.C.'s first commercial-free public television service.

A public meeting will be held Aug. 7 at 8 p.m. and supporters of commercial-free television are invited to attend.

Elliot said the CBC decision comes shortly after a Victoria city council request it postpone sale of the facilty and is the final step toward breaking a promise to establish a Victoria station.

He said CFRE research shows the CBC has spend roughly $3 million on the Victoria studio, and it's not likely that amount will be recovered by the sale.

After the sale the society will continue attempts to lease the building from its new owners, Elliot said.

Tenders called on roof for Queen Alexandra

A spokesman for the architectural company of Wade Williams Partnership said tenders will close at 3 p.m. Aug. 14 in its office at 914 Gordon.

An inspection of the roof last year revealed deterioration and a complete re-roofing was recommended.

"Specifications have been developed for a new modified inverted roof system that will slow this type of deterioration and the ministry of health has seen fit to go ahead with the project," Health Minister Rafe Mair said.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE IS $1,200.00

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges' decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

11. Prevue reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.

12. Puzzle clues may be abbreviated and such words as AN, THE and A omitted.

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week!
THIS CROSSWORD is not a draw. It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a work list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

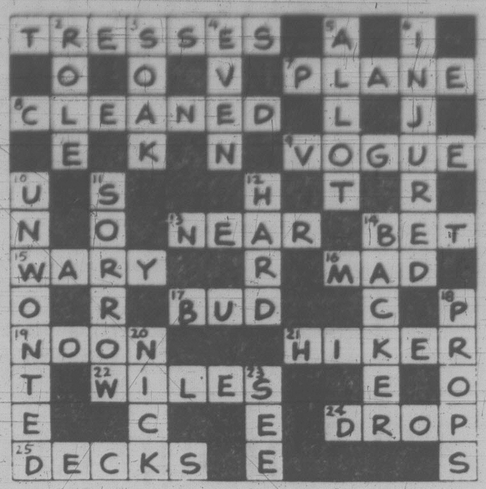
Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

1 TRESSES not dresses. Though she may look very nice in a pretty dress, one may doubt if the possession of a number of pretty dresses does anything for a girl's personal charm. "TRESSES" is more directly apt.

7 PLANE not plant. Since one readily assumes anyway that a plant is normally accessible to the wind, the clue's proviso: "If on open ground" is hardly wanted for plant, and lends aptness to "PLANE." (If on the ground and not in a hangar, aircraft may be vulnerable unless lashed down.)

8 CLEANED not cleared. He would hardly want the window cleared as an end in itself; rather, he would want the display changed. He might want a window (possibly defaced) CLEANED.

9 VOGUE not rogue. As the term "exceptionally attractive" tends to assume, a VOGUE is more or less attractive normally.

14 BET not beg. A tendency to look down on beggars is more universal than the clue's phrasing ("There are people . . .") suggests.

15 WARY not warm. The note of inevitability struck by the phrase "bound to have some effect" suits the more undesirable case, i.e., that of wariness rather than warmth.

16 MAD not bad. The idea of the villain being a MAD scientist is quite apt. To call a person already specified to be the villain, bad seems somewhat pointless.

17 BUD not mud. Most BUDs arrive with the spring while mud can be present almost any time during the year.

21 HIKER not biker. The probability is that the biker is out largely for exercise while the hiker is traveling.

22 WILES not wives. There is no evident reason for him to take a poor view of their wives.

25 DECKS not docks or ducks. DECKS, of course, are designed to take the weather. As regards ducks, which don't really get wet, there is arguably no such thing as a "drenching" downpour (that it should be of consequence or not). Docks — which consist largely of water — are similarly inapt.

CLUES DOWN:

2 ROLE not rule. As a matter for debate among players, an important ROLE is more firmly apt than a rule which is usually quite unambiguously put, and not "easily" apt to cause argument.

3 SOAK not soap. Ordinarily, you SOAK things in water, but you soap then with soap and water (you don't just need water).

5 ALLOT not allow. He may well ALLOT a specific time initially, but if necessary he will allow more time to complete the treatment required.

12 HARD not card. The idea of expertise making it "look easy" refers to a HARD trick. A card trick may actually be quite an easy one to perform.

14 BACKER not banker. Whether a banker or not, it is essentially a BACKER you have "behind you" as a cushion against financial difficulty.

School board offices proceed

Greater Victoria School District has chosen an architect and a construction management company to design and direct its new administration building project at the former Tolmie Elementary School.

The project will involve tendering for different phases of construction as required, instead of engaging a single general contractor and tendering the whole $1.5 million project at once.

For Concordia Management Co., a Vancouver firm, it will be the second large management project for an educational building in Greater Victoria.

The first was the nearly-completed Fisher building for Camosun College.

Identity of the architectural consultant will be announced shortly by school trustees.

Tolmie school, erected in 1912, and an annex built later, will replace the Paul building at Camosun's Lansdowne campus, which was bought to increase Camosun classroom space.

District planner Bob Yates said the school board has made a committment to Camosun to vacate the Paul building in the next year.

Between now and the end of the year, he expects an engineering study, architect's design and the necessary construction drawings to be completed, allowing work to start early in the New Year.

Yates said Concordia will be responsible for seeing that the tendering and different construction phases merge smoothly.

Tolmie School is a designated heritage structure and must not have exterior architectural alterations.

Although it has a masonry facade, it is actually a wood frame building and this may limit the interior changes necessary to convert its use from classrooms to offices.

An engineering survey will determine what problems there may be in that respect, Yates said.

At the same time building and fire code requirements must be taken into account to arrive at a closer cost estimate.

Tsehum Harbor study backs pollution fears

A preliminary environmental study of Tsehum Harbor in North Saanich has confirmed Ald. Jay Rangel's worst fears.

The harbor is polluted.

Just how badly isn't known, but the results have dashed hopes of using the harbor for marine farming or mariculture.

The study, undertaken by West Coast Information Research Group of Port Alberni at a cost of $850, had been commissioned by council at Rangel's urging.

He suggested the move to counter a 35-lot subdivision proposed by businessman Bob Wright.

If mariculture was shown to be viable, council could have used the evidence to bolster its case with the Land Commission to have Wright's property returned to the Agricultural Land Reserve.

The 25-acre property was removed from the reserve early this year by the provincial cabinet.

Rangel said the study was nowhere near as extensive as he would have liked.

The consultants spent only one day touring the harbor. Although Rangel had a boat standing by, they didn't use it.

However, he said their report points out a need for an in-depth, comprehensive impact study of the entire east coast of Saanich Peninsula.

"The area is very fragile environmentally," he said. "I think the report illustrates that."

Salmon derby September 21

The 11th annual salmon derby sponsored by the Saanich Rotary Club and CFAX radio station will be held September 21.

The derby will begin at daybreak and continue until 3 p.m. in an area from Port Renfrew, following the international border to East Point, west to Ganges, Cowichan Bay and Sanich Inlet.

The derby is for sports fishermen only and commercial fishing gear and use of professional guides is prohibited.

A unique feature of this derby is that any legal size salmon entitles the fisherman to enter a draw for an air trip for two to Hawaii with $500 spending money.

Prizes have been donated by local merchants for the 10 largest fish and other draws.

Anyone can participate in a draw for a 1980 Toyota Tercel sedan.

Tickets are available from Saanich Rotary members, the ticket booth in Hillside Shopping Centre and marinas and sporting goods stores.

This year proceeds from the derby will go to the B.C. Heart Foundation and the Canadian National Institute for the Blind as well as other charities assisted by the Rotary club.

English pianist displays profound musical intellect

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A towering keyboard mastery in the hands of a wholly musical personality directed by a profound musical intellect.

That may sound like hyperbole. But, in a single sentence, it is an honest impression of the English pianist, John Ogdon.

Ogdon joined the Johannesen International School faculty and the International Festival this week, appearing first in a memorable performance of Beethoven's 'Archduke' Trio, and Thursday, in Brahms' Concerto No. 1 with the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra conducted by William Shookhoff.

As well as being one of the most virtuosic concertos, the Brahms is also one of the great masterworks in the piano-orchestra literature. It is demanding from every aspect and the performance we heard Thursday, interpretively, and from the soloist, technically as well, could be regarded as a definitive one.

Ogdon unleashes torrents of sound from the piano, all of it resonant and full; his double trills are miraculous.

Sometimes he floats over the keys eliciting the most subtle and delicate colorings. His runs flash and shimmer, his great chord passages conjur mental images of huge avalanches.

But there is never one phrase uttered for shallow effect. All that he does arises from a total artistic and logical concept which in turn is the result of an inspired view of the whole work.

It is this power of thought and understanding that makes Ogdon an artist of such supreme stature among the world's great virtuosi. He is without doubt an interpretive artist of gigantic talents.

Throughout the concerti programs William Shookhoff has revealed authority and sensitivity in shaping and controlling the orchestral forces. In all three works performed Thursday — Mozart's Motet, Exultate Jubilate and the Violin Concerto in G Major in addition to the Brahms — his skill provided balanced and interesting accompaniment marred only momentarily by some wind problems.

Daniel Heifetz was the soloist in the violin concerto. He is an artist whose playing is consistently poetic and capable of producing the most charming effects. The Adagio of the G Major is a tender evocative theme that is sung against a muted accompaniment of plucked and bowed strings, and it was beautifully done.

Heifetz performed the outer movements with his own fluent and well-made cadenzas, warm, sweet tone and grace in the vibrant passage work.

In the opening number, the Exultate Jubilate, soprano Leslie Allison revealed a lovely pure voice that is flexible and at ease with the considerable coloratura demanded in this difficult and joyous work.k

Ogdon performs again on Sunday at the McPherson Playhouse, with Jean-Jacques Kantorow and Philippe Muller in the Brahms Piano Trio in B Major. Also on the program the Duo Karr-Lewis will be heard in a selection of great works for double bass and piano or harpsichord.

the report was that forestry revenues were up instead of down.

Government income from forest operations — primarily from stumpage charges — was $40 million higher than forecast in the first quarter. However — the government expects a major slump in forestry revenues in the rest of the year.

The finance minister has already asked his cabinet colleagues to consider where their ministry expenditures can be cut and he has ordered a freeze on public service hirings.

He told a press conference the hiring freeze is being gradually eased but he has under consideration other unspecified revenue measures if things get worse.

Curtis denied the suggestion that the government is deliberately painting a bleak financial picture as a ploy, to prevent Ottawa from carrying out its threat to tax B.C. gas exports.

"I'm not that Machiavellian," he said. "This is not some plot to warn Ottawa away."

However he used the occasion to reiterate the provincial government's argument against a federal tax on energy exports.

There are only two major obstacles to a balanced budget, he said — the possibility of the U.S. recession being even more severe than expected and the possibility that Ottawa might re-route our gas export revenues into federal coffers.

The financial report reveals that B.C. Hydro and ICBC were both $15 million in the red at the end of June.

Another loser is the B.C. Steamship Co. which operates the Victoria-Seattle ferry service. It shows a net loss of $1.1 million for the Victoria Princess compared to a loss of $297,000 at the same time last year, when the Princess Marguerite was in use.

Curtis pointed with pride to the fact that the B.C. Railway is showing an operating profit of $6 million.

However when interest charges on its massive debt are added in, the BCR was actually showing a net loss of $21 million.

TOWN TALK

That crack by Premier Bill Bennett about MLAs, scotch and cornflakes has triggered a rash of jokes.

Opened by the minister, the bag contained a box of cornflakes and a mickey of what appeared to be scotch but was actually cold tea.

Fifteen minutes after the meeting started, Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Garde Gardom rushed out and asked reporters if they'd nip down to the store.

"We're running out of cornflakes," Gardom said.

And the NDP, not to be outdone, at its traditional party for the press gallery Wednesday night served up — you guessed it — cornflakes and scotch.

Town Talk hears Saanich municipal crews have billed Ald. Irene Block for the cost of cutting down weeds on her Blenkinsop Valley property.

Inside sources say the champion of preserving rural land in its natural state ignored an order to remove the weeds and employees were forced to cut them down.

The order was given under the municipality's noxious weed bylaw after neighbors complained about the unsightly growth.

Block made a veiled reference to the incident at a recent council meeting when she said plants grow fast and thick in the valley because of the rich soil.

English medical student Charles Wakeley had a sudden urge to hike the West Coast Trail while visiting relatives in Victoria recently.

He left town on a Thursday afternoon in his street shoes and was back in time for dinner Saturday.

Equipped with a plastic sheet for shelter and enough food for about five days, Wakeley figures he covered the arduous 44-mile trail in just over 1½ days.

Why the big hurry?

"My camera batteries ran out," he explained.

Wakeley plans to buy extra batteries and walk the trail again some day at a slower pace.

"I think next time I'll take a tent and some decent walking shoes," he said.

A small army of employees from 17 divisions of B.C. Forest Products will be at Lansdowne school grounds today, Saturday and Sunday.

The occasion: BCFP's annual slow pitch ball tournament being hosted this year by the company's Victoria wood products division.

What's the betting they all use aluminum bats?

Self-styled city watchdog Joe Richards is a constant source of controversy — even in stories written about him.

A profile of Richards which appeared Wednesday in the Times, seemed to indicate that Ald. Bob Wright moved the Undersea Gardens to its present location.

Not so, says Wright, who points out the tourist attraction was located on the Inner Harbor before he acquired an interest in the business.

It opened there in 1969, Wright says, and he became owner in 1976.

Sky-watchers became excited this week when they saw a huge Canadian Coast Guard helicopter flying around Victoria.

Had the federal government finally decided to loosen the purse strings and increase the Victoria fleet?

No such luck.

Capt. Bill Exley, Transport Canada's superintendent of lights, says the Sikorsky 61, which costs about $1.5 million and can carry 20 to 30 people, was on loan from Prince Rupert to help the Victoria base catch up with a backlog of work. It's now back in Prince Rupert.

It was nice while it lasted.

Latest service shuffle sees Capt. Mark Taylor leave CFB Esquimalt after nearly two years as chief of staff operations at Maritime Forces Pacific headquarters.

He's off to Kingston to attend the National Defence College.

Taylor joined the Royal Canadian Navy as an officer cadet in 1955. He has served in the Chaudiere, Skeena, St. Laurent, Gatineau and Iroquois and has been in command of Thunder, Assiniboine and Huron.

Capt. Colin Shaw, base commander at Esquimalt, will take over Taylor's position on Aug. 26.

Sheri-Ann and Mike Stanek of Bainbridge Island down in Washington State were married recently and came to Victoria for their honeymoon. Were they ignored? Not on your life.

The surprised couple found themselves with two free nights accommodation at the Strathcona Hotel, a free dinner for two at the Delta Laurel Point Inn and a mittfull of tickets to various attractions in the city, courtesy of the Victoria Attractions Association.

So what's special about the Staneks? They just happened to get picked as the Jaycee Tourists of the Month.

Great way to start a marriage.

Another 10-speed bike was pinched in Victoria this week.

The theft — from 688 Falkland — involved a Dawes Super Galaxy owned by Janet Wright.

It's not just the bike's value that has Janet upset.

She took it on a European trip after buying it in London and wheeled it through Spain, France, Portugal and other parts of the continent.

"Besides, it's my only means of transportation," she says.

Local bike dealers say you can't buy the model in this country and even if you could, the replacement cost would run to more than $500.

Janet says any help in recovery will be deeply appreciated.

If your idea of fun is watching people jump off a 2,235-foot mountain, you will enjoy the third annual fly-in being hosted on Salt Spring Island Saturday and Sunday by the Victoria Hang Gliding Club.

Fly-in director Ian Vantreight expects about 60 enthusiasts from B.C. and Alberta and a number of pros from last week's Grouse Mountain meet. They'll get in 150-200 flights a day between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

They'll be launching from Mount Bruce, the highest point on the island, and landing at the Burgoyne Dairy field in the Fulford Valley.

Who are the midnight marauders?

Racoons are suspected but a parks spokesman said it could have been a ravenous raven, or even a malevolent mink.

There will be no second helping. A protective cover is being made for the guinea pig cage.

Holly Frederickson had a good summer project lined up this year but it ran aground on the rocks of financial reality.

Holly's project was to establish a thrift shop in Victoria for the Capital Mental Health Association, a non-profit organization. She tried to find a store with at least 260 square feet for $100 a month or so but was unsuccessful.

Anyway, Holly needs help in locating suitable quarters for the store. If you can help her and the CMHA, call her at 595-1151.

After 59 years at the same location at 1012 Douglas, Sprott-Shaw business college is moving.

President Robert "Bud" Smith says the college has been looking for more modern, attractive premises for some time and he thinks that's been found in a building at 1822 Blanshard.

Renovations have been under way since May. Moving date is Aug. 13.

Geoff FitzGibbon says 37,000 Canadians are working flexible hours . . . and are sold on the system.

Flextime

Set your own working hours

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Imagine strolling into work at 10 a.m., taking a two-hour lunch break at noon and then heading home at 3:30 p.m. — finished for the day.

Working hours like that are a fantasy for most people, but a reality for the staff of a Victoria insurance company.

Guardian Insurance Co. of Canada has been on Flextime — a concept allowing employees to decide their own working hours — for several years.

Employees and management are happy with the system, says Bobbi Browett of the company's personnel department.

"It's a good system. People don't feel like they're punching a clock, or if they come in a few minutes late they don't feel guilty."

There's always one bad apple who tries to take advantage of the system, but for the most part, giving employees that much responsibility does work, Browett says.

"As a matter of fact I have trouble keeping them (work hours) down."

Every company is different and at Guardian the 30 staff members must each work 135 hours a month.

When they work, with the exception of certain peak business hours called core time, is up to them.

Work schedules are arranged to suit individual lifestyles.

Core time, when everyone must be in the office, is 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 3:30 p.m. There must be at least one person on duty in every department between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

If someone works through lunch or stays late, he or she builds up credit hours that may be taken in days off.

If an employee takes too many long lunch hours, the deficit must be made up next month.

A piece of electronic equipment called a programmer clocks the hours of work as each employee records arrivals and departures from the office using a plastic, coded key.

At the end of each four-week period, the hours are added up and the clock set back to zero.

Flextime was created 10 years ago by a German aircraft company trying to solve traffic problems faced by employees.

Half the German work force uses the concept and it was introduced to 22 other countries by Hengstler, an international, German-based firm.

It was brought to Canada as a division of Hengstler's company Hecon Canada Inc. in 1972.

Western region representative Geoff FitzGibbon said 250 Canadian companies employing 37,000 people now operate on flexible working hours.

Most firms on the system find productivity increases and absenteeism dramatically reduced, he said.

Largest employers in the private sector are insurance companies with provincial governments (Quebec and Alberta use the system) a close second.

Flextime opened its first B.C. office in Delta last year and is trying to get the provincial government to switch.

So far, seven Vancouver companies have joined up, including Federal Pioneer, Royal Trust and Continental Insurance.

For a fee that works out to roughly $10 an employee, Flextime will send a consultant to help a company switch to the system for a three-month trial.

If satisfied, the company can adapt permanently for an additional cost of $60 for each employee, including the cost of the electronic clocking equipment.

Nurses accept 35.6%

Registered nurses employed by the Capital Regional District have voted 79 per cent in favor of a 45-month contract which provides a 35.6-per-cent wage increase.

By the end of 1982 an RN's basic salary will be $1,945 a month.

Ratification averts the need for binding arbitration — scheduled to start next week — of the dispute.

The nurses have been working without a collective agreement since March 31, 1979.

Although the settlement is retroactive to April 1, 1979, the wage increase provisions are retroactive only to Jan. 1, 1980, and the agreement will expire Dec. 31, 1982.

$10 million investment in Saanich motor hotel

The motel project proposed for Douglas and McKenzie will involve a total investment of $10 million, a spokesman for the company wanting to build it said Thursday.

The 236-unit motor hotel to be built on property owned by Saanich aldermen Ed Lum will have a swimming pool, restaurant and cocktail lounge but won't include a pub, realtor Von Thompson told the Times.

An application to rezone four acres now occupied by Ed Lum Greenhouses has gone to the municipality and will be voted on by council this fall.

Memco Ltd., an Alberta company which owns motels in that province, has an option on the property and director Ali Esmail has moved to Saanich to handle the investment. The deal is conditional on rezoning, Thompson said.

"We think it's a strategic location with the extension of McKenzie to Highway 1," said Thompson, who with partner Jack Lidstone of Victoria Real Estate is handling the rezoning application and real estate transaction.

Ald. John Mika, who three years ago blocked an earlier rezoning attempt, said this one will be treated like any other rezoning application.

In 1977 he blocked an attempt by then-mayor Lum to rezone his property from farm residential to tourist commercial.

But Mika says he has no quarrel with the application by Memco Ltd.

"I have to treat this application like any other and judge it on its merits," he said.

Man robbed in store

City police are looking for a man in his early 20s who attacked and robbed an elderly man in Eaton's store Thursday night.

A police spokesman said Anthony Kovach, 74, was in a fourth floor washroom when the man approached him and asked for $10.

When Kovach said he didn't have that much on him the man struck him three times in the face, breaking his glasses.

Kovach then handed over all the cash he had — $6 to $8 — and the man fled.

The incident occurred about 7:40 p.m.

Firms agree to oil top-up

Heating oil companies contacted Thursday said if asked, they'll top up customers' tanks before higher oil prices go into effect.

The price of heating oil and gasoline is expected to go up by seven cents a gallon as a result of the $2-a-barrel increase in the price of oil announced by Alberta.

Spokesmen for several oil firms told the Times if it's impossible to meet every request before the hike is imposed bills would be adjusted.

A spokesman for Birnie Fuel Oils Ltd at first said the company would not top up tanks but later said if requests were "reasonable," according to their customer records, they would do so.

"But it would't be feasible for instance, to drive to Langford to put just 20 gallons in one tank," the spokesman said.

A Victoria Coal and Heating Ltd. spokesman said: "If somebody requests a delivery before the price increase we'll look after them."

Imperial Oil Ltd. and Home Heating Oils said they will carry on with normal deliveries and, although down to skeleton staff in the summer, will try to top up tanks if requested.

"We would give the customer a break. If we didn't get around before the price hike, we'd adjust (the price)," he said.

A Gulf Canada Ltd. spokesman said it would be almost impossible to top the tanks of every customer in the next two months but the company will make a list of requests and if some are missed before the price hike, they will get an adjustment.

Centre gets past another one

The convention centre cleared another hurdle in the planning process Thursday night as city council voted 5-2 to change the zoning on the Inner Harbor to permit the project to be built.

Council also deflected several last-minute attempts to invalidate the public hearing held last week on the rezoning and a proposal by Ald. John Cooper to hold a city-wide referendum on the issue.

There are still several more key pieces of the jigsaw puzzle not yet in place. Revised plans for the project at Fort and Wharf still must come before council's design panel and the Advisory Planning Commission and council must vote on issuing a development permit, expected to take several more weeks.

Opponents of the convention centre tried to ask questions about the project or to submit further information, but were not allowed to speak.

The Municipal Act states that after a public hearing has been held and before they vote, aldermen may not receive any communications, verbal or in print, about the issue.

"These are all attempts to invalidate the proceedings," said city solicitor Jakob de Villiers when Betty Gibben, 933 Convent Place, tried to give the mayor a letter which she said contained a verbatim account of a submission to last week's hearing.

She questioned the accuracy of the minutes recording the speakers at the July 23 hearing, but de Villiers said if council received the letter the courts might hold that the subsequent vote on rezoning was improper.

Cooper's initiative drew support from only Ald. Gretchen Brewin, as Mayor Bill Tindall, Ald. Ron McKenzie, Frank Carson, Ken Sinclair and Bill McElroy sent the referendum idea down to defeat. Ald. Bob Wright disqualified himself on grounds of conflict of interest and Ald. Robin Blencoe was absent.

"This community is not of one mind on this matter," said Cooper in defence of a referendum.

Not just a fringe group is opposed to a waterfront convention centre but many respected members of the community.

McElroy said council could not hold a referendum until the next elections.

Not too accurate but Martin's life is an open book

NEW YORK — I promised myself I wouldn't. I knew I shouldn't. Yet I succumbed to the temptation, and now Billy Martin's life is an open book on my desk. Serves me right.

The book is entitled "Number 1." That much of the autobiography, written with Peter Golenbock, is accurate. It's the number Martin wore with the New York Yankees, as a player and manager, and you can look it up. What's contained between the covers bears much closer scrutiny.

Perhaps Martin and Golenbock expected such skepticism on the part of readers. Because right there in Golenbock's introduction, in the very first paragraph of the book, they confront the issue head on: "For Billy Martin there could have been no other way. He was determined not to pull punches, to write an autobiography naming names, protecting no one, putting his heart, soul and guts on paper for puplic appraisal. 'This is the United States, not Iran, not Russia,' Billy told me, 'and it's about time someone stood up and told the truth for a change.'"

Leave it to Billy to stand up for truth, justice and the American way. It's just that Martin's version of the truth frequently clashes with what other interested parties perceive to have happened. Perhaps with all the abuse and physical threats to which Martin is subjected, the order of events becomes muddled.

What is clear from a quick reading is that George Steinbrenner is among the most diabolical literary villains since Simon Legree. He forced Martin to sign a major league baseball contract which violated Jimmy Carter's human rights campaign, made a series of trades apparently designed only to antagonize his manager, drove Number 1 close to a nervous breakdown with constant suggestions and commands and then, after unfairly firing him, smeared his good name all over baseball. Other than that, Billy liked George.

Of course, it is important that we realize how many people Billy liked, even loved. They include some of the last people you would suspect of inspiring Martin's affection. Ken Holtzman, the forgotten pitcher, for one. "As I said," Martin writes, "I really liked Kenny as a person. I just wasn't over-enthused about his pitching, and maybe that was my fault, too. Most of his problems was that I didn't pitch him enough."

Then there was Mickey Rivers. "I loved Mickey like a son," Martin notes. And that is a familiar theme in the book. It wasn't the players who made Martin's life difficult; it was the front office, the meddling executives, the Steinbrenners of the world.

Pitcher Dave Boswell once took a few swings at Billy outside a bar when Number 1 was managing the Minnesota Twins. That's all right. Billy understood.

After the pair finished their punchout, says Martin, "I looked at Boswell, and I felt sick. His face was bleeding badly, and I felt terrible because I really liked the kid, he was like a son to me."

There are more fight sequences in this book than in "Fat City," starting with a high school basketball confrontation in which the opponent "went down in a pool of blood." Martin does not recommend such behavior to everyone. "Believe me," he writes, "if I could give a speech to every kid in the country on staying out of fights, I would."

As near as he can figure, Billy is persecuted for his size. "I honestly believe if I had been six-foot-five," he says, "I'd have never been in a fight in my whole life." But although he never has started a single fight, he is fated to depend on his fists. There always have been people out there waiting to get him. "You'll see that, all through my baseball career, there was somebody trying to undermine me."

Perhaps credibility or the lack of it will not be a factor in the book's success. If those prolonged ovations for each of his returns to Yankee Stadium can be translated into sales, "Number 1" may rise to the top of the best-seller lists. It's too bad that the finished product is so sloppy.

How much can anyone accept when the old hotel in the Bronx in which so many Yankees lived during the season is identified as the Concord Plaza? On the Grand Concord, no doubt. Or when the Yankees' current hotel headquarters in Kansas City is called the Crownson (for Crown Center)? True, these merely represent mistakes in transcribing Martin's tapes. But Frank Lucchesi is spelled Luchese several times, and he was one of Martin's coaches in Texas.

When such little attention is paid to names and places, why should anyone trust the authors with socalled facts? From Martin and Golenbock we learn that Ralph Houk, who earned a battlefield commission to major in the Army during World War II, was a Marine. And that Mike Royko of the Chicago Sun-Times, perhaps the most celebrated newspaper columnist in America (he wrote "Boss," the bestselling story of Mayor Daley's machine), works for the Tribune.

These are some of the things I would not have known if I hadn't read "Number 1." I'm going to close the book now and tell myself never again to open it.

Sound advice, if I do say so myself.

Depailler a victim of training mishap

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (AP) — French race driver Patrick Depailler was killed today when he crashed his Formula I racer during training for the German Grand Prix, a hospital spokesman said.

Depailler, 36, swerved off the track in the controversial east curve of the fast Hockenheimring race course, said Michael Briechle, spokesman for the German automobile club, AVD.

A Red Cross helicopter flew Depailler, who drove a Marlboro team Alfa Romero 179 racer, to the surgical department of nearby Heidelberg University clinic.

Depailler, who was divorced, is survived by one child. He began racing in 1966 and drove his first Formula I race in a Tyrrell at the French Grand Prix in 1972.

His first Formula I win came at Monaco a year later in the Ford-powered Tyrrell. By the time of his death, Depailler had participated in 95 Formula I races.

Tonight in sports

Fastball Super Series action featuring the Victoria Budgets and Northwest League baseball with the Victoria Blues, both at Royal Athletic Park, highlight the first part of a busy holiday weekend of sports in the city.

As well, there is automobile and horse racing and cricket plus the usual host of sports coverage on television.

TONIGHT

The Blues are home to Bend with the baseball action getting under way at 7 at Athletic Park. The two teams meet again at 1 p.m. Saturday and at 7 p.m. Sunday and the Blues open a three-game home series against Walla Walla at 7 Monday night.

In softball, Ingraham Hotel plays Remco Office Supplies in a Heywood Avenue Men's League game at 6:30 at Heywood Park and the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League invitational tournament, running all holiday weekend, begins at the same time at Central Park.

Harness racing goes again at Sandown Raceway with first post at 5:30 and Saturday's meet starting at 1:30.

SATURDAY

Budgets play Portland Ray Bristowes at Athletic Park at 7 and again at 1 p.m. Sunday. On Monday, it's Budgets versus Decatur, Illinois, at 1 p.m.

Only cricket match in the city is Albion against Metchosin at 1 p.m. at Beacon Hill Park while Oak Bay travels up-Island to play Nanaimo.

Auto racing features stock cars and jalopies at Western Speedway with gates opening at 6 p.m., time trials starting at 7 and the events getting under way at 8.

Television

Sportsweekend on Channels 2 and 6, featuring the North American Hill Climb from Onrangeville, Ont., and horse racing, kicks off the day's sports coverage at noon.

At 12:15, there is baseball, with California Angels at Toronto Blue Jays and Chicago Cubs at San Francisco, on Channel 5 and at 12:30 Wide World of Sports on Channel 4 highlights the San Diego Chargers against the Green Bay Packers in the Hall of Fame game.

There is Players International Tennis on Channel 8 at 1:30 p.m. and at 3:30 there's a choice between racquetball on Channel 2 and Sports Spectacular on Channel 7, with car racing from the Alabama International Motor Speedway and the WBA junior welterweight championship bout between Antonio Cervantes and Aaron Pryor.

Channel 8's Wide World of Sports at 4 p.m. features the 14th annual Nanaimo Bath Tub Race and the North American tractor pull championships from Cayuga, Ont.

Drag racing is featured on Channel 4 at 5:30.

And one of the day's highlights for Victoria fans will be the coverage of the North American Soccer league game in Seattle between the Sounders and the Vancouver Whitecaps. It's on Channel 8 at 7:30.

Forest saves face

TORONTO (CP) — Nottingham Forest earned its first win on the last game of a North American tour by beating Toronto Blizzard 3-1 in an international soccer game Thursday night.

The English club salvaged a three-game tour against North American Soccer League teams when forward Ian Wallace made a sliding stab to tap the ball inside the left goalpost and beat substitute goalkeeper Tony Churksy in the 60th minute to break a 1-1 deadlock. In previous matches, the fifth-place First Division team tied Tampa Bay Rowdies 0-0 and Vancouver Whitecaps 1-1 last week.

MOSCOW (AP) — Sebastian Coe of Britain, taking the lead around the final bend, won the 1,500-metre race today in the Olympics as his favored countryman, Steve Ovett, wound up third.

The victory avenged Coe's unexpected loss to Ovett in the Olympic 800-metre race last Saturday. This was the first meeting ever in the 1,500 between the British rivals. They have met twice over 800 metres and once in an obscure cross-country race as teen-agers.

And this was the first time that Coe had beaten Ovett.

The first three laps of the four-lap race at huge Lenin Stadium were slowly paced, with Jurgen Straub of East Germany running out front. Coe and Ovett were close behind him.

Then as the field turned for home, Coe shot past Straub and into the lead, and Ovett never could catch him. In fact, Ovett did not even catch Straub, who wound up second.

Coe's winning time was three minutes 38.4 seconds. Straub was clocked in 3.38.8 and Ovett in 3:39.0.

The winning time was far off the world record of 3:32.1 shared by Coe and Ovett. And it also was much slower than the Olympic record of 3:34.9 set in 1968 by Kip Keino of Kenya.

After the race, the excited Coe covered his face with his hands, knelt down on the ground and cried.

Meanwhile, Hungarian heavyweight Istvan Levai will take a bronze medal home — scarcely a historic achievement for a countryman of Laszlo Papp, the first triple gold medallist in Olympic boxing history.

But Levai has a claim to fame beyond the medal that came to him Thursday as a losing semi-finalist. He was the first of 10 opponents in three Games to stay for three rounds with Teofilo Stevenson, the 29-year-old Cuban destroyer who is favored to duplicate Papp's achievement Saturday night.

If history was being made, it was lost on the crowd, since the Hungarian concentrated on denying a target to the defending champion's lethal right hand and threw few punches of his own. Stevenson landed enough left jabs to win a unanimous decision, but few spectators attend Olympic boxing tournaments to watch Stevenson throw left jabs.

His opponent in Saturday's final will be Pyotr Zaev, a muscular Russian, in one of five Soviet-Cuban matchups on the card.

In all, eight Cubans and seven Russians reached the finals. Cuba, with only two gold medals to show for 12 days of Olympic competition, was counting heavily on Stevenson and his colleagues to match or improve on the three boxing titles they won in Montreal four years ago.

There was no scarcity of gold in the Russian camp as Soviet athletes won seven of Thursday's 11 finals for a total of 69 victories in 163 events. Second-place East Germany was unable to add to its 37 golds and no other country appeared likely to reach double figures.

Yuri Sedykh, who had led a Russian medal sweep in the hammer throw at Montreal, did it again with a world-record heave of 81.80 metres as Sergei Litvinov, who held the former mark of 80.66, took the silver medal at 80.64. Four throwers exceeded Sedykh's former Games record of 77.52.

Another Games mark, which had stood since 1968, was harshly treated in the women's long jump as six contestants improved on the 6.82-metre leap by Viorica Viscopoleanu of Romania at Mexico City. When the competition ended, Soviet jumper Tatiana Kolpakova had pushed the record to 7.06, defeating Brigitte Wujak of East Germany by two centimetres.

Bronislaw Malinowski of Poland, who had been third in the 3,000-metre steeplechase in 1972 and second in 1976, finally won the event when he overtook Filbert Bayi of Tanzania in the final lap. The time of eight minutes 9.7 seconds was the fastest in the world this year.

Bayi, former world-record holder for the mile and 1,500 metres, took the silver in 8:12.5. It was Tanzania's first medal of the Games.

Arietta leads Blues back into second

Central Oregon Phillies are the opponents tonight when the Victoria Blues come home after levelling their Northwest Baseball League record at 20-20 by defeating host Walla Walla Padres 7-2 Thursday night.

Padres crushed the Blues 17-0 the night before.

Thursday night, righthander Al Arietta threw a six-hitter and Barry Moss hit a three-run double in the third inning to provide Blues with a quick 5-0 lead.

Arietta, in winning his fifth game of the season against two losses, was working on a shutout going into the ninth. But Jerry Davis' sixth homer of the year, with a teammate on base, put the Padres on the scoreboard before 830 fans.

The Blues capitalized on four walks and two Padre errors to score five runs in the first three innings.

Paul Kirsch drove in two runs with a double for Victoria and teammate Lazondo Washington cracked his second homer of the season in the ninth inning.

The victory boosted the Blues back into second place in the Northern Division, a half game ahead of Walla Walla. Victoria trails Bellingham by 6½.

Concern for strikeout king

HOUSTON (AP) — J.R. Richard, Houston Astros' hard-throwing righthander, has a weakness in his left arm and left leg that doctors caution may persist despite emergency surgery to remove a blood clot.

Surgeons who performed the two-hour operation late Wednesday night said in a statement Thursday that Richard may have suffered a stroke when he collapsed during a workout at the Astrodome.

"There were apparent signs and neurological symptoms, indicating impairment of circulation to the brain which would be suggestive of a stroke," the doctors' said in a statement released by team spokesman Rick Rivers.

Drs. Charles McCollum and George Noon determined after their examination that immediate surgery was required to restore "good circulation to the arm, neck and brain," Rivers said.

Richard, the major league's strikeout king, was listed in stable condition late Thursday. But the doctors said that while the operation was a success, "there is an obvious weakness in his left arm and left leg."

Rivers said that after discovering the weaknesses Thursday, the doctors said they hoped "the weakness may be transient in nature due to the edema and swelling and that it may clear up in a matter of several days."

The physicians declined to speculate on whether the weakness would be permanent, but they cautioned "that it must be recognized that there is a possibility that there may be residual weakness involving the left arm and the left leg," Rivers said.

Richard, the National League's ERA leader last season at 2.71, had compiled a 1.89 ERA so far this season before complaints of a dead arm led Astros officials to place him on the team's 21-day disabled list on July 16.

The Astros' million dollar hurler pitched the first two innings in All-Star game July 8 in Los Angeles. He left the mound early in 10 of his last 17 starts, prompting criticism from team-mates and fans.

Hospital tests last week detected an arterial circulation impairment in the right shoulder area, but doctors had said surgery would not be necessary.

After the 30-year-old pitcher collapsed, doctors ran additional tests that detected a blood clot in the neck. Surgery was performed about 12 hours after an ambulance rushed him back to Methodist.

Doctors said the subclavian artery, located under the right collar bone, was the affected blood vessel.

No prognosis has been made on whether Richard will be able to resume his pitching duties with the National League team this season.

"Our main concern is for his health, more than his pitching future," Rivers said.

All signs point to the Royal Victoria Marathon

Now's the time to enter Sept. 20 run

By MAX LOW

You are cordially invited to a marathon race with class.

So say the posters advertising the first annual Royal Victoria Marathon which were put up on notice boards at all recreation centres, the YM-YWCA, sports and other stores this week by marathon chairman Peter Wheaton's attractive assistant Shelley Wilson.

Starting at Mile Zero of the Trans Canada Highway in Beacon Hill Park at 7:30 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 20, the race follows a certified 26-mile, 385-yard course around the city's beautiful Beach Drive.

Somewhere between 200 and 300 Victorians have been training and attending Royal Victoria Marathon clinics since Jan.1 in preparation for the event which is sponsored by the Times, Radio V190, the Osaga running shoe company, Molson's Brewery and The Bay.

But Wheaton expects more than 1,000 runners from all over Canada and the United States including Hawaii and from as far away even as Japan to take part.

Official entry forms are now being mailed out to all those who have inquired and the forms will also be available at the rec centres, the Y, and all sports and department stores. You can also obtain entry forms by contacting the Royal Victoria Marathon Committee, #290, 1066 Douglas Street, Victoria V8W 2C3.

Despite the Royal Victoria Marathon logo of a little king, complete with robe and crown, running, there aren't expected to be too many members of royal families competing. The "class" however will be brought into the event with the inclusion of several "name" marathoners from Canada and the States, including Victoria's own Mike Creery a member of the national Olympic team.

And, if he lives up to his promise and gets here in time, Victoria's now-famous fund-raising runner Al Howie will take part.

Howie plans to run in the Chasquis Edmonton Marathon, being staged as part of Alberta's 75th anniversay celebrations, on Aug.31 and then run the roughly 900 miles to Victoria, arriving here a couple of days before the Royal Victoria Marathon.

This, too, is a fund-raising effort on Howie's part and anyone wanting to sponsor him for a penny or so a mile can do so by phoning V190.

But, along with the better-known runners will be hordes of people taking part not just for the glory of winning but for the satisfaction gained from knowing they have completed, maybe for the first time, the gruelling marathon course.

"As well as those attending the clinics running from the Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park every Sunday morning, we know there are many people training in up-Island centres," explains Wheaton. "We expect around 400 or 500 runners from the Island alone."

The marathon chairman advises, though, to get those entries in now as the entry deadline is Sept.1. It costs $6 per person to enter.

There will be major awards for first man and woman finisher as well as youth and team prizes and every competitor completing the course will receive a Royal Victoria Marathon T-shirt. The awards ceremony will be held immediately after the race in the United Way-sponsored beer garden.

PETER WHEATON
. . . committee chairman

Wheaton's invitation to enter big event

On behalf of the Royal Victoria Marathon Committee, the Province of British Columbia and the City of Victoria, I invite you to run in the 1980 "Royal Victoria Marathon," on Saturday, September 20, 1980, in our beautiful garden city of Victoria.

This is Victoria's first B.C.T.F.A.-sanctioned marathon run over a fast scenic waterfront course. We intend to offer you a first class, well-organized race with plenty of pre and post race activities for everyone to enjoy.

Our race committee has been working hard over the past months to ensure that this race will be a great success and a credit to our fine city. We anticipate a large field of entries.

I sincerely hope you will be able to join us in a very memorable experience. I look forward to seeing you on September 20th.

Peter Wheaton,
(Royal Victoria Marathon Committee Chairman)

Power Squadron's course best bargain for boaters

One of the best bargains for people planning to take to the saltchuk is the course in basic boating put on by Canadian Power Squadrons.

The Victoria Power Squadron has its next course well in hand and will have a registration booth in the Mayfair shopping mall next Friday and Saturday (Aug. 8-9).

The booth will be open during regular shopping hours and squadron members will be on hand to answer any and all questions.

The course will be held from Sept. 23 to March 10 at Spectrum Community School, 957 West Burnside, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

In addition to the material used in previous years, the new course will also include instructions on canoeing, trailering and electrical hazards in deference to the large increase in trailerable boats. There is also a strong possibility that marine electronics and weather may be included in the curriculum.

The fee of $55 includes all study material, such as charts and dividers. Chief instructor this year will be Neil Milner.

If for any reason you can't sign up at the booth, you can register by either phoning Gerry Clarke at 479-3137 or Darrell Westover at 592-1995.

A total of 200 registered for the last course and most of them are now doing their thing on the water with a lot more knowledge under their belt.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, had a good turnout for its 31st annual invitational regatta on the weekend.

Dennis Robinson's Coco II won the long-distance race from Cadboro Bay to Esquimalt Harbor. Another Thunderbird, Doug Taylor-Lee's Helios, placed third in series racing in the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet's Division 1 and won the trophy for top Thunderbird. Barry Wright's Trade Winds Tri won the division, runner-up being Ron Jewula's Beowulf.

Ed Haines' Lotte won the Division 2 series, Nigel Hunter's Dania finishing in second spot. Tied for third place were Peter Holtham's Nymphea and Larry Restall's Black Hawk. Black Hawk also won the trophy for top Sailerette.

In dinghy competition, Rob Moore skippered his 420 to top spot and Rupert Holmes-Smith won the Laser series.

While most boaters will be concentrating on cruising, rather than racing, this holiday weekend notable exceptions will be the six-metres competing in the Lipton Cup series.

Local six-metre enthusiasts are hosting the prestigious event on behalf of the Puget Sound Six-Metre Fleet. The activity will be centred at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club with racing probably taking place in Haro Strait.

This design is one of the most graceful to ever come off the drawing board and the racing should be well worth watching if you're in the area.

If you're looking for a book to add to your library you couldn't go wrong with Roger Vaughan's Fastnet. He crewed aboard Jim Kilroy's 79-foot sloop Kialoa during the memorable 1979 Fastnet and the book vividly describes the frenzied ocean, 70-knot winds, the 30 to 40-foot walls of water and the shuddering blows as Kialoa's bow smashed into the seas.

Vaughan is well-known for his previous books — The Grand Gesture and Ted Turner-The Man Behind The Mouth. Numerous articles in Life, Look, The New York Times, Esquire, Yachting, Sail, Motor Boating and Sailing have made his name almost a household word.

Apart from the drama of the race itself, Vaughan uses the storm as a lens, through which he reviews his confusions, sadness and joy, the pain of growth and his unreleneting love of life itself.

Fastnet also vividly describes what it takes to own and sail a Maxi Boat like Kialoa — a Maxi Boat is the largest boat that can race under the International Offshore Rule without special dispensations.

When you think of spinnakers costing $8,000, headsails coming in at $6,000 to $7,000 and one of the relatively smaller requirements, six halyards that cost $400 apiece and replaced every six months or so, you're only touching the tip of the iceberg. Without any major changes, it costs $300,000 a year for Kilroy to operate Kialoa.

The book also gives an absorbing insight into Kilroy, showing the drive which took him from a penniless youngster to one of Canada's richest millionaires. I found the book so fascinating I could hardly drop it — even to eat.

The beauties of Nitinat Lake will be explored by members of the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club this Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Robert Espley will be back from his Wells Gray trip to organize this sortie and can be reached at 382-6767 for more details.

Twitty continues hot golf streak

Times News Services

Howard Twitty's attitude about golf is a paradox.

Twitty wants to play well and win, but he doesn't want to become a household name and be bothered by the nuisances that go with fame.

How do you do that?

Not even Twitty could answer that one.

"My goal is not to be the best player in the world," said Twitty, 31, after he shot a seven-under-par 64 to tie for the first-round lead Thursday with Ben Crenshaw in the $250,000 Philadelphia Classic.

"That is the goal of a lot of players," said the 6-foot-5-inch Twitty. "If I come out and play well I'm satisfied."

Twitty shot 31-33-64, and Crenshaw, a seven-year tour veteran, 34-30-64, both equaling the tournament 18-hole record held by five others.

Twitty may not want to be a household word, but the way he's playing golf these days, he's sure heading in that direction.

Twelve of Twitty's last 13 rounds have been in the 60s. In the last three PGA tournaments plus Thursday's first round here, he has shot 52 under par.

At Brampton, Ont., despite three-putting the 18th hole, Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., fired his second consecutive one-under-par 71 to maintain his lead in the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association senior championship.

Gilford has a two-stroke lead over Bill Kozak of Niagara Falls, Ont., who had a 71 in the second round.

Al Balding of Toronto shot a 73 on the 6,791-yard Brampton Golf Club course for a 145 total, two better than Jack Kay of Toronto and three ahead of host pro John Henrick.

Esquimalt Amateur

Colwood's Jim Girard and Harry Panteluk of Gorge Vale will defend the major trophies in the annual Labatt's Esquimalt Amateur golf tournament at Gorge Vale Golf Club this weekend.

Both Saturday (8 a.m.) and Sunday's rounds (12:45 p.m.) will get away with shotgun starts.

Signing denied

MONTREAL (CP) — Winger Alain Bouchard says he will play hockey for Geneva in Switzerland next season and denies he had signed a contract with Los Angeles Kings as the National Hockey Laague club announced.

Breakers upset Bemisters to pick off second place

Island Dryco Breakers toppled champion Bemister's Welding 12-4 at Hyacinth Park Thursday night to grab second place in the Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League, thanks to another fine pitching performance by Pam Jones.

Jones hurled a four-hitter, striking out seven batters and walking one, for her 18th win in 22 decisions as the Breakers finished two points ahead of idle New York, New York in the last league game of the season.

Kathy McHarg had two hits for the Breakers, including a three-run homer, while teammate Barb Bissenden had three hits, one of them a triple.

The top three clubs play this weekend in district playoffs to decide the team to advance to the provincial senior "B" tournament here the following weekend.

Also this weekend, Butler Brothers and Victoria Athletics start a best-of-three series to determine the team to represent Victoria in the B.C. Intermediate championships in Kelowna.

In the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League Thursday night, Rob Coldwell singled and scored the winning run in the eighth inning as Ingraham nipped Royal Oak 2-1. Winning pitcher Ray Beveridge threw a one-hitter.

And in the Macdonald Park Men's League, Rebels downed James Bay Inn 5-1.

One of several softball highlights this holiday weekend will be Mayfair Insurance and P.J. Novelty's nine-team double-knockout men's tournament beginning at 6 p.m. today at Reynolds Park on Reynolds Road near Cedar Hill Cross Road. Saturday and Sunday games start at 8 a.m. and on Monday it's a 9 a.m. start.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Former champion makes comeback

Former stock-car and superstock champion driver Ross Surgenor returns to action at Western Speedway Monday to drive in the second of two programs planned for the holiday weekend.

In the first program Saturday night — gates open at 6, time trials are at 7 and racing starts at 8 — there are 10 races for stock cars and jalopies.

Rick Hogg, who is in second place in jalopy standings with 365 points to leader Dave McIntyre's 404, has bought a '68 Cougar previously driven by Al Miller and will also drive in the stock events.

Dave Taylor with 347 points leads the stock-car standings over second-place Gord Stone, who has 331, and third-place Jim Smith with 299.

The superstocks, lead by Al Vanderbyl with 294 points over Joe Musfelt with 218, will go Monday along with stocks and jalopies. Gates open at 2 p.m., time trials are at 2:30 and racing starts at 4 o'clock.

Bears obtain lengthy pact

CHICAGO (AP) — A 20-year contract for Chicago Bears to play their National Football League games at Soldier Field has been unanimously approved by the Park District board.

Under the agreement, the Bears must pay 12 per cent of the annual gross gate receipts. The team also must pay a $1 a ticket surcharge and some $3 million, the estimated cost for building 54 glass-enclosed luxury boxes at the lakefront stadium, which is undergoing extensive renovation.

McRae battles scorer for homer

Times News Services

The official scorer at Kansas City's 13-3 trouncing of Boston Red Sox Thursday night tried to do just that — and vilified a number of Royals, including manager Jim Frey.

"I've been struggling all year and now that I'm getting some hits it seems like I have to worry about the official scorer," said McRae, who has been known in the past to complain at times when things didn't go his way.

The official scorer gave Lynn an error on the play.

Then Frey stepped in.

"This is 31 years of baseball experience talking," Frey said "and any time two outfielders collide like that, it's a hit."

And then it was no longer an error. Then it was a three-run, inside-the-park homer for McRae.

In three other American League games, Texas Rangers trimmed Baltimore Orioles 7-4, New York Yankees beat Milwaukee Brewers 7-6 in 11 innings and Detroit Tigers demolished California Angels 15-6.

Baltimore's Steve Stone, it seems, isn't quite in a class with Walter Johnson, Lefty Grove, Schoolboy Rowe and Smokey Joe Wood. They share the American League record of 16 consecutive victories. Stone's run ended at 14, thanks in part to Texas' four-run first inning.

Mickey Rivers, Al Oliver and Jim Sundberg collected three hits apiece, and Buddy Bell had a two-run double in the Rangers' big first inning.

Milwaukee catcher Charlie Moore, thinking triple play, forgot to tag Bobby Murcer as he crossed the plate on Eric Soderholm's 11th-inning bases-loaded grounder, giving the Yankees their victory.

Murcer and Bob Watson singled, then Reggie Jackson, who had hit a three-run homer in the ninth to tie it, was safe when shortstop Robin Yount bobbled his grounder. Soderholm then grounded to Jim Gantner, who stepped on third to force Watson and fired home. But Moore failed to tag Murcer.

Budget trio in super form

Although Victoria Budgets, as a whole, have been batting better against pitchers in the Northwest Fastball League than they have in the Super Series, three of the club's batters have reversed that trend.

Budgets are hitting around .225 as a team in the Super Series compared with about .260 in the league.

But the three Budget batters who are doing better, in fact, in the Super Series are Randy Benn, Reg Underwood and Alden Govenlock.

Benn is hitting only .212 in league games but has an impressive record of .357 in Super Series.

Underwood is hitting a respectable .268 in the league and an even-better .344 in Super Series.

And Govenlock, recovering lately after a bad start to the season, is hitting .250 in Super Series but only .227 in the league.

The averages will change, no doubt, this holiday weekend when the Budgets (17-7) wind up the Super Series with six games here.

Victoria hosts Portland Ray Bristowes for doubleheaders at 7 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday at Royal Athletic Park and play Decatur, Ill., in a final doubleheader starting 1 p.m. Monday.

Hudon wins three

Hudon was behind Rays Golden Patch ($4.90), which won the fourth race, Cut the Deck ($4.40), which took the fifth, and Commando Jove ($7.20), which came home first in the seventh.

A total of $114,558 was wagered by 1,316 fans.

Results from Thursday's meet and entries for tonight's racing which starts at 5:30:

Metal worked over by Landscapers

League champions Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal were shocked 8-5 by G. and W. Landscaping in the second game of the South Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League playoff semi-finals in George Pearkes Arena.

The Landscapers got two goals from Rav Pallan and it was the first loss this season for the Metalmen. The teams meet again in the deciding game of the best-of-three series at 8 Tuesday night.

The other semi-final series was won in two straight games by Victoria Athletics, who scored a 12-10 victory over Saanich Metro Honda Thursday.

Triathlon draws 59 entrants

Sri Chinmoy's first-ever triathlon event in Canada has drawn a field of 59 entrants and will start Sunday at 7:30 a.m. at Elk Lake.

Event organizer Dale Erven of Victoria said Thursday there were 31 entrants from Victoria, including four women, nine from Washington, three from Oregon, nine from the Mainland and seven from up-Island.

The four Victorians are among seven women entered for the gruelling event, the youngest of whom are 16-year-olds Karen MacDowell of Victoria and Sue Bouck of West Vancouver. Oldest is 30-year-old Sheina Lerman of Victoria.

Contestants swim one mile across Elk Lake, cycle 20 miles through the Saanich Peninsula and end the event with a six-mile run.

Tracy Pratt joins Bruins

NEW WESTMINSTER — Tracy Pratt, a former National Hockey League defenceman who assisted Ernie McLean in coaching New Westminster Bruins last season, has been named general manager of the Western League club.

Pratt, who also coached Abbotsford of the B.C. Junior League, joins coach Muzz McPherson in the "new-look" front office.

Shamrocks face day of decision

Everything depends on their last league game of the season Saturday night for Victoria Shamrocks.

The Rocks play Nanaimo Timbermen up-Island and must win to finish first in the Western Lacrosse Association league standings.

They were in that position Thursday night by the Coquitlam Adanacs who downed New Westminster Salmonbellies 19-10 at Queen's Park Arena to take over top spot.

The Adanacs are two points ahead of the Rocks right now. A win Saturday night would leave the clubs even on points but Victoria would take the league title because of a better goals-for-and-against average in games between the two this season.

Contract Bridge : B. Jay Becker

South	North
2♡	3♣

1.♠AKJ83 ♡AQ74 ♢Q96 ♣10
2.♠KJ952 ♡AK86 ♢— ♣QJ43
3.♠AQJ65 ♡KQ942 ♢J84 ♣—

1. Three diamonds. Your partner made two forcing bids and you should therefore assume he has not only the necessary game-going values but possibly also the values for a slam. Even though you have substantially more values than your first two bids indicated — you have 16 high-card points and might have had only 12 — the best you can do now is bid three diamonds.

Three diamonds is forcing, because both you and partner have been bidding constructively all along, and the chief purpose of saying only three diamonds at this stage is to force partner to reveal whether he has a game or a slam in mind. It would be wrong to bid three notrump instead, because that would indicate minimum opening bid values. It would also tend to describe 5-4-2-2 distribution rather than 5-4-3-1 distribution. The final contract depends mostly on what North does over three diamonds.

2. Five clubs. A raise to four clubs would suggest that you had only a minimum opening bid and were responding to three clubs merely because partner had forced you to bid again. But you have much more than a minimum, once partner mentions clubs, and you can best show it by leaping to five clubs. The jump-raise in this sequence virtually guarantees four trumps and a void in diamonds. After you raise to five clubs, the rest is up to partner.

3. Three diamonds. Here, again, you bid three diamonds. The effect of showing your three-card trump support belatedly is that partner will read your three messages (bids) as indicating 5-5-3-0 or 5-4-3-1 distribution. However, your high-card strength is still unknown to partner.

You hope North will now bid three hearts or spades, in which case you plan to bid four in the suit of his choice. This might leave you with the feeling that you were underbidding slightly, but that's the best you can do under the circumstances.

Once you've described the nature of your hand fairly well, you let partner make the final decision. This approach is the backbone of any good bidding partnership; you attempt to portray your high-card and distributional values as well as possible and hope that partner will then be able to choose the best final contract.

FUN WITH FIGURES

"You've got three kids, eh?" said John. "I met two of them at your party."

Jordan whips up Arabs on Jerusalem question

AMMAN (AP)— Jordan urged all Arab states Thursday to "stand united" against Israel's formal annexation of Jerusalem's Arab sector and the establishment of the holy city as its capital.

A government spokesman also said Jordan will "reconsider" its relations with any country that accepts the Israeli move. He cautioned all countries of the world against moving their embassies from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

The Israeli parliament, or Knesset, passed a law Wednesday proclaiming both the Israeli and Arab sectors of Jerusalem the capital of Israel. The United States and Egypt opposed the move as conflicting with the Camp David peace accord, the basis for the 1979 Israel-Egypt peace agreement.

And Arab diplomats at the United Nations are reported considering asking for a Security Council debate.

However, Israeli officials in Jerusalem said they expect the protest over the new law to subside with minimum damage.

Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister Manachem Begin rebuffed the new Arab-Israeli peace effort by the European Common Market. He met in Jerusalem with Gaston Thorn of Luxembourg, current president of the European Community's council of foreign ministers, and told him Israel will not be distracted from the Camp David peace formula.

Thorn is touring the Middle East to sound out the Israelis and the Arabs. The prime minister told him Europe should "not interfere, disturb or create obstacles" in the U.S.-sponsored peace process, a spokesman for Begin said.

The nine West European nations in launching their peace initiative in June called for participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Israel's arch foe, in the peace negotiations.

King Hussein of Jordan met with Austrian chancellor Bruno Kreisky in Vienna on Thursday to discuss the Middle East situation. Neither leader would comment on the 90-minute talk, which Hussein initiated on the third stop of a tour to muster European support for the Arab cause.

Prior to his talk with the king, Kreisky called the situation in the Middle East "extremely bad" and said the new Israeli law aggravates the conflict.

In Tel Aviv, Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir announced his resignation Thursday from Prime Minister Menachem Begin's cabinet, but said it is not the result of a policy dispute.

Tamir, a member of Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin's Democratic party, said he will remain in the governing coalition and continue to support Begin's government.

Tamir is the third minister to leave the government during its three-year tenure and his resignation further weakens Begin's political position.

Tamir said he feels it unfair for his party, which has only four members in parliament, to have three cabinet members.

WASHINGTON — There are big bucks on the Alaska portion of the Canada-U.S. natural gas pipeline.

"Welders and welder's helpers can make $100,000 a year, John McMillian, of Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co., said Thursday, adding with a smile, "but they might be working seven days a week, 24 hours a day."

Spanish banker slain

MADRID (AP) — The marquess and marchioness of Urquijo, members of one of Spain's leading banking families, were found shot to death in their beds in their suburban Madrid home today, police said.

Police said the couple apparently were killed by robbers. After a servant reported nothing missing from the house, police declined to discuss possible motives for the killings.

Police also declined to discuss a report from the Bank of Urquijo, where the marquess was a member of the board, that the couple was threatened by the Basque separatist organization ETA. Neither the marquess nor the marchioness was active in politics.

Police said a burglar alarm system was disconnected and a window leading from the garden was broken.

The only servants present were the maid and gardener, police said. Neither reported hearing shots.

Insurance for enemy a bit late

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A Pennsylvania company sent a veterans group insurance enrollment card to Second World War petty officer Walter Rehbein, but the situation has become a little embarrassing. Rehbein was on the other side.

He served in the German forces under Hitler from 1939 until his capture by the U.S. Navy during the 1944 invasion of southern France. Rehbein, 58, was held as a prisoner of war until 1947.

This week he received the card in the mail, offering the policy and asking him to complete the form and mail it back to Valley Forge, Pa.

"Somebody must have goofed," Rehbein said Thursday. The American Veterans Group Insurance Trust Co. agreed.

Rehbein worked for the U.S. military in Germany until coming to the United States in 1958.

He became a citizen in 1965.

Black strikers sent back home: paper

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The liberal newspaper Rand Daily Mail reported that Johannesburg council officials and police armed with shotguns, rifles and semi-automatic pistols went to black housing areas and through the night loaded about 1,200 strikers aboard a fleet of buses and sent them back to their tribal homelands.

Meanwhile, police arrested the head of an unrecognized black city workers union as he met with his lawyer at the Supreme Court after city council officials said they had "broken the back" of a four-day strike by municipal employees demanding higher pay.

Joseph Mavi, head of the Black Municipality Workers Union, which is unrecognized by city officials, was taken into custody by three plainclothes police as he consulted with the group's lawyer in the corridors of the Supreme Court building.

The lawyer was preparing to make an urgent application seeking to restrain the council and the minister of police from taking action against workers involved in the strike.

The South African Press Association reported lawyers acting for Mavi's union were told he was being held under a section of the General Law Amendment Act which provides for 14 days' detention without trial. The period can be renewed by order of a magistrate.

Mavi's union, which says its members include about 9,000 of Johannesburg's black municipal workers, led the strike which began Monday. On Wednesday, more than 10,000 black workers were off the job.

The strike had no major impact except for garbage piling up in the streets. It was called to back demands for an increase in city workers' minimum weekly pay to $75 from $43, and for recognition for the union.

Officials told the strikers they had just received a raise on July 1, boosting weekly minimum pay from $39.50.

Bobby Van dies

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor-comedian Bobby Van, a 25-year veteran of Broadway musicals, television and film, died Thursday at UCLA Medical Center of brain cancer. He was 47.

Van last appeared as the emcee on the television series, Make Me Laugh, and had a lengthy list of credits in the movies, including Kiss Me Kate.

He did a nightclub act with Mickey Rooney for seven years and starred with his wife, Elaine Joyce, in a TV special, as well as making frequent appearances on the Ed Sullivan Show, The Jackie Gleason Show and as host of the Mrs. America Pageant.

Born in New York on Dec. 6, 1932, Van was one of the last of the MGM contract players along with Debbie Reynolds, Elizabeth Taylor and Donald O'Connor.

He appeared in nine movies, 24 television series or specials and in 1971 won a Tony nomination for his starring role in No, No, Nanette.

Youth held in L.A. probe

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A teenager has been arrested in Michigan on a homicide warrant issued by Los Angeles police in a slaying that was being investigated as one of the 44 possible Freeway Killings, authorities say.

James Munro, 19, was arrested without a struggle Thursday in the apartment of a relative in Port Huron.

William Bonin, 33, has been charged in 14 of the killings.

Krait venom tamed

MONROE, La. (AP) — A 24-year-old man bitten by a krait — a snake far more poisonous than the deadly cobra — has been saved by a blood transfusion from a man who says he has survived more than 100 poisonous snake bites, officials say.

James Lee, 24, an amateur in herpetology, the study of snakes, was in serious condition today at St. Francis Medical Centre. He was bitten on the finger Wednesday while feeding one of the six kraits in his collection of 30 snakes.

"He still cannot move his eyes," said Dr. Ernie Rutherford, who is treating Lee at St. Francis. "He cannot lift his eyelids more than about halfway. But he is alert. He is conscious. He never lost consciousness through the whole thing."

The blood transfusion came from Bill Haast, operator of the Miami Serpentarium Laboratory.

"It turned out to be very fortunate for him that we both have the same blood type — A-positive," said Haast, who flew to Monroe Wednesday night with his assistant, Nancy Harrell.

Ms. Harrell said Lee was also lucky that only one fang punctured him — the other fang hit a fingernail on his right hand. She said Lee was lucky, also, to have been bitten by a young krait.

Return shah's loot: Bani-Sadr to U.S.

Times News Services

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr called on the United States today to return the wealth of the late shah and militants holding the U.S. hostages said the struggle would go on until "the crimes of the United States are exposed."

"In a statement following the death of Iran's deposed Shah, the students (militants) said his death will have no effect on those hostages," the Kuwaiti news agency reported today

In an interview published in the Japanese newspaper Mainichi Shimbun, Bani-Sadr said Washington also should not interfere in Iran's domestic politics if it wants to improve relations with Tehran.

"And they (the U.S.) should turn over the properties left behind by the shah and his family," Bani-Sadr said.

The United States has said that it would not prevent Iran from initiating legal action to obtain the shah's wealth.

Iran maintains that the deposed shah "stole" up $30 billion in assets when he fled Iran in January 1979. A spokesman for the late rulers family said he left about $50 million to his family in a will.

In the interview, Bani-Sadr also charged the Soviet Union was interfering in Iranian affairs.

In other developments, Tehran Radio reported that 48 people were killed in a clash between Iranian revolutionary forces and Kurdish insurgents.

Meanwhile, twenty Iranian women who were arrested in Sunday's demonstrations and who face deportation proceedings were dragged — kicking and shouting — from the District of Columbia jail to interviews with immigration officials Thursday night.

And the 173 Iranian men who have been in jail since the demonstrations, were in the fifth of a hunger strike today, forcing corrections officials to consider intravenous feeding to keep the uncooperative prisoners alive.

And in Paris, aA nephew by marriage of the late shah of Iran has been found dead in his apartment from an overdose of barbiturates, Agence France-Presse news agency reported today.

Farrashad Abbas Vahid, 32, married a niece of the shah several years ago. Recently he moved to Paris.

Afghan plot fails?

NEW DELHI (AP) — Afghan army forces apparently planning a coup against the Kremlin-backed regime of President Babrak Karmal were foiled by Soviet soldiers after word of the plan leaked to the Soviets, said reports from Kabul.

The reports, which could not be independently confirmed, were quoted Thursday by a diplomatic source.

He said the plot was said to have been planned by Afghan forces stationed at the Pul i-Charki army base near Kabul. After the Soviets heard of the plan, they surrounded the base on July 18, the reports said.

The source said he had no information on how many Afghan soldiers were involved.

An Afghan traveller who recently arrived here from Kandahar in southern Afghanistan said the Kandahar Afghan army garrison and air units had been preparing to attack government strongholds in Kabul.

The San Diego Chargers may have a Big Chicken, the New England Patriots a male cheerleader, and the Los Angeles Rams a Little Old Lady, but the Miami Dolphins' cheerleaders, the Starbrites, want no part of Glenn Welt. "He's just not built like a girl," said Starbrites choreographer June Taylor. "I was not about to put him in pantyhose and leotards and have him waving hankies and pompons. The Starbrites have all-American girl appeal." But Welt, 31, an electronics firm executive, said he thinks the Dolphins' female fans "deserve a little stimulation too." So he filed a sex-discrimination suit against the Dolphins, charging the football club with violating the Equal Employment Opportunity Act.

Krogh

Jeanne Pruett got out of the music business for several years; then made a comeback that recently has put several of her numbers in the top 10. The growing fame also has put her house on the map of a Nashville touring company that takes rubberneckers around to homes of the stars. The result — a siege by autograph hunters and camera nuts, two peeping tom incidents and, last week, no room for her car in her own driveway which was blocked by fans.

Egil Krogh, the 10-year-old former head of Richard Nixon's infamous Plumbers Unit can practice law again, so he's one of 715 aspiring attorneys taking the three-day bar exam in Seattle.

When Anne Murray catapulted to stardom 10 years ago on the wings of her now classic Snowbird, she never dreamed it would come back to haunt her. But it seems there's another variety of "snowbird" — at least in the eyes of truckers. They tell her a "snowbird" is a hated species of driver "who cruises along at about 45 km/h enjoying the scenery" jamming up lines at gas stations and generally making a pest of itself. Says Anne, "I never thought the title of that song would take on any extra meanings other than that of a white bird, but what do I know? On my new album I recorded another perfectly innocent song and people are pointing out strange meanings for its title." The new song in question? Moon Over Brooklyn.

Dear Abby:

Our daughter is being married to a young man whose parents we have met only once, when the couple announced their engagement last June. They live 90 miles from us.

I wrote to the mother of the groom, explaining that we planned a catered reception and dinner, but because we are on a very tight budget she should limit her guest list to 100 people. (Our list is also limited to 100.)

She sent a list that numbered 130, explaining that she couldn't possibly trim it because they "owed" so many people. (Her guests were mostly friends — not relatives.)

I wrote back saying our budget would allow for only 200 and no more. She phoned to say that she could eliminate only two, and that was final!

Abby, the invitations must be mailed soon. I have two choices: Either trim my own list to 72 so she can have her 128, or trim her list myself and take the consequences. In view of her unreasonable attitude, would I be justified in doing this?

Wedding Headache

Dear Headache:

Don't trim her list unless you want to start World War III.

Tell her you regret that your budget doesn't allow for any more than 200 guests, so she will either have to trim her list to 100 or pay the tab for the extra guests who cannot be eliminated.

Dear Abby:

Can a girl get pregnant from kissing with her mouth open?

Needs to Know

Dear Needs:

No. But it's a good beginning.

Dear Readers:

Sheila Cole, formerly of England, and now of Mulga, Ala., sent me a poem from "This England," an English publication. She wrote, "I hope you think it's good enough to share with your readers." I do, and I shall: If God should go on Strike. How good it is that God above has never gone on strike. Because He was not treated fair in things He didn't like. If only once He'd given up and said, "That's it, I'm through! "I've had enough of those on earth, so this is what I'll do. "I'll give my orders to the sun — cut off the heat supply! "And to the moon — give no more light, and run the oceans dry. "Then just to make things really tough and put the pressure on, "Turn off tha vital oxygen till every breath is gone!" You know He would be justified, if fairness was the game. For no one has been more abused or met with more disdain Than God, and yet He carries on, supplying you and me With all the favors of His grace, and everything for free. Men say they want a better deal, and so on strike they go, but what a deal we've given God to whom all things we owe. We don't care whom we hurt to gain the things we like; what a mess we'd all be in, if God should go on strike.

Anon.

NANOOSE BAY (CP) — There isn't much for the crew of a deep-sea oil drilling rig to do during their off hours except eat — and the chief steward of the Ocean Bounty makes sure his men are kept occupied.

The Ocean Bounty, which stopped off in this harbor on the east coast of Vancouver Island for a refit, carries a crew of 83 who work 12-hour shifts around the clock on one-month tours of duty.

The hard physical work demands plenty of hearty fare. The isolation and the ban on alcohol, narcotics, female companionship and other diversions make food the No. 1 pleasure.

"We serve them very substantial meals," says chief steward Don McPherson. "Four a day — breakfast, lunch, dinner and midnight.

"Breakfast is hominy grits, hot and cold cereals, bacon, sausages, any style eggs, biscuits and hotcakes. Lunch and dinner we usually serve two entrees — fried chicken, breaded chops, cutlets, fish — potatoes, two vegetables, five salads, various relishes and rolls.

"And we have rice, red beans and gravy — a lot of these boys come from Louisiana and that's a staple in their diet."

McPherson and his staff of seven work for Universal Services, a Seattle-based caterer that supplies cooks and housekeepers for drilling rigs and industrial camps. As chief steward, McPherson also is responsible for shopping for groceries in neighborhoods as diverse as Chile, the Canary Islands or Britain's North Sea.

The mess hall is open 16 hours a day, but there are always cookies, brownies and sweet rolls next to the coffee urn in the hall. And if a crew member wants a snack, or popcorn for the movie, McPherson and his staff are happy to oblige.

"Oh, they've got to have their popcorn for the movie," McPherson says. "Food takes on a special importance when you're stuck out in nowhere. They get very fussy, but we try to take good care of them. The big excitement today is getting the ice cream machine fixed. It's been out of operation for three weeks."

McPherson handles special dinners for visiting oil company VIPs in his usual stride.

"Fancy dinners? I've been a chef for 32 years and if I have the ingredients, I can make anything, plain or fancy."

With all the food available, does weight become a problem?

Usually not, says a crew member, although "some come on board real skinny and leave a lot heavier."

"Some guys bring their weightlifting equipment on board and work out with that; others use the helipad for jogging if the weather's not too bad. Couldn't do that in Alaska, though. Too cold."

"I wouldn't want to be a cook on one of these things for anything," says another young man with a Southern accent.

"We work hard, but they have the hardest job of all.

"I've been on the rigs for five years now. There was one where we had a gourmet cook — you know, cream sauces, filet mignon, rack of lamb — but he only lasted a few days because nobody liked it.

"When you get a good cook, you try and keep him. They took Don off and sent him somewhere else a few months ago. We complained until we got him back."

Sylvie the staring secretary . . . up front relaxing

MONTREAL (CP) — Sylvie the secretary sat in the first row, saucer-eyed and slightly sauced, forgetting her 9-to-5 grind with a bit of bump and grind.

A few feet in front of her unemployed soccer player Andrea Puzo, wearing only his boots and a smile, was rocking and reeling and generally dedicating himself to the proposition that all men are not created equal.

"I like to get away and relax," said Sylvie. "I mean, we can have our fantasies, can't we?"

Club 281, the all-male strip club whose fame has spread through the powder rooms of the city, has attracted 75,000 patrons, most of them women, since it opened almost four months ago.

And they react, from Sylvie the staring secretary to Mary the market research student, to the three blue-haired grannies looking down their glasses.

"This is nothing like the girlie bars, most of which are quite cynical. These guys don't suffer the recriminations those girls do," said Mary.

The decor is classy as strip clubs go, the dancing to a subdued disco beat is good, and the customers, well, they act like ladies. (No unescorted males are allowed.) But the club has a china shop look-but-don't-touch ambiance and no matter how erotic the dancing becomes, contact is prohibited.

"Maybe it's all too blatant to be sexy," said Sue. "It's not an intimate setting. A lot of fun, but for myself it's not a turn-on, although one of the dancers does have a great behind."

The dancers include Andrea Puzo, who last year played for the Canadian national soccer team in France; Steve, a professional stripper whose girlfriend works at a strip club down the street; and Anthony, a ballet dancer trying to get to New York.

Each does a traditional three-dance set, which begins with the dancer fully clothed, then partly covered and finally naked.

"I like to wear a suit on stage for my first dance," said Puzo. "I want the women to really see who I am. I look more like myself in a suit.

"When you dance nude you have to concentrate. You can't think about the girl in front of you, if she's beautiful, or if she attracts you. You know, I would be shy if I had to get up and dance before one girl, but in front of 1,000, I'm okay."

Six months too young for dental visit

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

At what age do you think a child should first be examined by a dentist? Our baby is now 6 months old. I want to be sure that we can avoid some of the dental problems my husband and I are now having.

Mrs. S.M.

Dear Mrs. M.:

I don't recall ever having received a letter asking about preventive dentistry for a child so young.

I have inquired of a number of dental surgeons and they told me that children are usually brought to them at about the age of 4 or 5. They all agree that children who are brought to the dentist at an even earlier age would reap many benefits.

Dr. Gary Belanger, of the University of Colorado School of Dentistry, pointed out that there is a definite trend towards earlier first visits to dentists. He suggests that, even at the age of 1 or 1½ years, valuable contributions can be made to their health. He said, "With a little practice and indulgence, even children this young can learn to enjoy routine dental care."

Dr. Belanger added: "Parents should be responsible for dental hygiene until their children are able to take over the task themselves. As soon as the first tooth erupts, at about six months, a daily routine of care should be instituted. Initially, the teeth can be wiped with a cotton swab or wash cloth.

"By the time the child is a year or a year and a half, a toothbrush can be used, with or without fluoride toothpaste. Fluoride should be given orally, starting at about six months, unless the community has water containing fluoride at ideal levels."

Dr. Belanger says that "parents should be particularly cautioned about allowing children to have a nursing bottle as a pacifier, filled with carbohydrate-containing liquid — especially sweet soda, or even milk. Constant access to such a bottle, particularly in children older than one year, can result in tooth decay. If a bottle is given as a pacifier, it should contain only pure water and should always be taken away when the child has fallen asleep."

"Dental awareness" that starts in infancy and early childhood will undoubtedly be reflected in excellent adult dentition. Not long ago, teeth that might have been preserved were almost routinely taken out. This was particularly true of countries outside of the United States.

Enormous strides have been made in preventive dentistry as well as in rehabilitative dentistry. With the newer knowledge of nutrition and the modern strides in dentistry, it can well be expected that healthy teeth will be preserved throughout middle age and even thoughout the life span.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am a 14-year-old girl. My problem is one that faces everything that lives — death. Often at night when I go to bed I start thinking that one day I'll be dead. I start to feel sick and soon I end up crying. This has been happening to me for nearly three years. My mother told me I would have to solve this myself, but what I'd like to know is if other people have this, what can I do about it and is there something wrong with me?

Answer: No, everything is right with you and you are having a natural reaction to growing up. You are beginning to understand yourself. You say death faces everything that lives: That is the key. If you were not living, you would not face death.

Everything that is biological must face death: that is the price we pay for life. So the first thing to look at squarely is, that life is worth the price.

The greatest fear of death is that not only will the things and people we are used to disappear, but that we will disappear. It is the fear of nothingness and meaninglessness. There is nothing in science to comfort us here. Only faith in a person who has defeated death will do.

You must look for such a person — you will not have far to look. Awareness of death is a great opportunity for spiritual growth.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I'm a 14-year-old girl in Grade 10 who does not find herself attractive in any way. I've tried thinking positive, reading magazines on the subject, even talking to my friend. My friend is quite attractive and most boys like her. I'm happy for her but in all the years at junior high not one boy has ever looked at me or considered me a friend. I consider myself quite nice to everybody but it doesn't help. I don't want to wear make-up or fashionable clothes because I'm too young. I'm terribly depressed and often cry about it.

Answer: This won't help you now but I do want to reassure you that your feelings about your unattractiveness may well change soon.

For one thing, at the age of 14, your body and face are developing, and in that process you may not appear as pretty or co-ordinated as you would like.

For another, as you develop other interests, activities, talents, and relationships, you will become a fuller person, a more generally attractive individual.

I am not minimizing the role of looks in life and not only in getting guys. But I do know many young people your age who hate their appearance and soon evolve into very good-looking individuals.

Concentrate on those aspects of your personality which are attractive — emphasize the positive in yourself.

Dear Mr. Vichert:

Over a year ago, I had a fight with a girl friend, and we have not said a kind word to each other. This ex-friend has humiliated me in front of people. This person has told me what a rotten person I am, but not in such nice words. All this time I have not said a word back to my ex-friend. I need some good advice about what I should do. Should I keep my mouth shut or should I tell her what I think of her.

Answer: She was your friend. Do you miss your friendship? Would you like to be friends again?

If the answer to those two questions is yes then I think you should tell her what you think of her, providing it is the good things that you liked about your friendship. It might also surprise her, and be helpful, if you were to say you were sorry for your part of the fight. Your friend may be missing your friendship and that could be causing her to be so angry. If it is important to you then I would suggest you find a way to help your friend become a friend again. If you don't think becoming friends again is possible then I think you should tell her the best way you know to stop being such an embarrassment to everyone, herself included.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6323.

Psoriasic clinic free of charge

From now on, outpatients utilizing the Victoria General Hospital's psoriasis treatment ward will not have to pay $1 a day fee for ultra-violet light exposures and medication.

In April of this year the government took over financing of the clinic from the VGH Auxiliary and reduced the daily rate to a dollar.

Initial fee when the clinic opened in July 1978 was $5 per day — with average stay per patient about three weeks.

Since opening, some 254 Vancouver Island residents — mostly from Greater Victoria — have been treated for the chronic skin disorder.

Referrals to the clinic are made through family physicians or dermatologists and prospective psoriatic outpatients or their families are invited to obtain further information by calling the clinic at 388-7931.

Victoria ostomates to Vancouver meet

Many members of the Victoria chapter of the United Ostomy Association will be in Vancouver Aug. 7-9 for the 18th annual conference at the Hotel Vancouver.

Delegates from the 192-member city chapter will include president Mrs. Isobel Williamson, first vice-president Mrs. Irene Reay and treasurer Mrs. Fern Beattie.

Between 1,500 and 1,800 ostomates from Canada, the U.S. and many other countries will attend.

The program will feature educational sessions given by physicians, nurses and other experts.

There will be displays by the major companies which manufacture ostomy supplies, featuring the newest equipment.

The aims of the association are to compile, publish and distribute information for the rehabilitation of persons who have or will have ileostomy, colostomy or urinary ostomy surgery.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Saturday, August 2, 1980

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You receive broader recognition — and you could be "head over heels" in love. Fellow Aries and Libra natives figure prominently. Accent on people who need on you, employment, special services, pets. You meet aggressive individual who could become a friend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New concepts, original approach and greater degree of independence — these are highlighted. Leo and Scorpio persons figure in scenario. Significant change occurs, ties in with a creative project and a serious relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look behind things, seek definition, be clear on policies. Clandestine meeting highlights agenda. You receive unusual invitation from club, group or professional organization. Be receptive, but remember commitment to family members.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Obtain hint from one who is familiar with legal rights, permissions. Accent on allies — and the opposition. Bring priorities into focus. You make discoveries — spotlight on public relations, close ties and marital status.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get on more solid financial footing — family member co-operates and domestic air is cleared. Taurus, Scorpio and another Libra figure in scenario. You locate missing item, debt is repaid and you can obtain genuine bargain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on communication, travel, long-range project. Aries, fellow Libra and another Pisces figure prominently. You gain insight into other cultures, languages. What appears a casual contact could become a "significant" relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Teach, learn, give full rein to intuitive intellect. One who aided you in past will make reappearance. Emphasis on shelter, security, willingness to do your "homework." Basic issues and quality material dominate scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on versatility, "applause" as result of resolving what appeared to be a major dilemma. Avoid temptation to scatter efforts — means finish one task at a time. Restless relative can find much for you to do — if you so permit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This can be a power-play. Know it, be confident, bring ambitions and aspirations into focus. Promote product — and yourself. Career advance indicated. One who "pulls strings" is willing to give you a "boost."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Maintain aura of mystery — don't tell all you know. Keep trump card in reserve. Wish is fulfilled once you prove that you can be discreet. Message will become increasingly clear. Pisces, Virgo persons are involved in intriguing scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Secrets dominate scenario. Pisces and Virgo natives play "featured" roles. You learn about money, where it is — and how it got that way. Strive for realistic attitude. See as situation is, not through haze of wishful thinking. You'll win, after a slight delay!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You'll be happier due to greater opportunity for creative expression. Romance, charisma, special praise from member of opposite sex — these areas are highlighted. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives play key roles in your recreational development.

IF AUGUST 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a blend of introspection and outgoing manner. Not too many of those near you get deep enough below surface to really know you. Scorpio, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. You are perceptive, generous and have tendency to brood and be your own most severe critic. During this year — and especially the month after next, October — you make major career adjustments and there could be a change of socializing patterns. Home life undergoes transformation which will settle a lot of past unsettlement. If single, marriage is indicated. If married, there could be addition to family. Married or single, there will be visits from people in your past. You get together with loved one once estranged.

Transition comes of helping volunteering

Many women feel the need of a natural bridge toward their career goals. For the woman planning a career change — from homemaker or student to paid worker or from one form of employment to another — volunteer work can provide the transitional step.

While some volunteer positions by their nature require previous experience, most provide the opportunity to learn new skills on the job.

Volunteers can take their choice of jobs which will furnish experience in such areas as planning, organizing, delegating, working as part of a team or independently, solving problems, meeting deadlines, and administering a budget.

Due to its flexible nature, volunteer work allows women to develop new skills and build experience on a part-time or intermittent basis.

Women may choose to work at a variety of volunteer positions to acquire the experience they want or to test alternative career options.

Volunteer experience properly documented on applications and resumes is becoming increasingly valued by potential employers.

A letter of reference from the voluntary agency specifically stating the duties performed, skills learned and qualities demonstrated by the volunteer can also be a convincing factor in the hiring process. Above all, a volunteer becomes actively involved in the community, meeting people and making valuable contacts of potential benefit to her career development.

Through the volunteer's accomplishments, she may come to be seen as an achiever, someone who has a valuable contribution to make as a paid worker.

Many women see their volunteer work as a career in itself. They may feel a strong drive to change the system, develop new programs to find needs in the community, meeting people and making valuable contacts of potential benefit to her career development.

Through the volunteer's accomplishments, she may come to be seen as an achiever, someone who has a valuable contribution to make as paid worker.

Many women see their volunteer work as a career in itself. They may feel a strong drive to change the system, develop new programs to fill needs in the community, or contribute their active support to a cause of special interest to them. Perhaps they have other commitments which make full-time paid employment undesirable.

Volunteer work can fill the need for meaningful activity in the community, while allowing some flexibility in relation to other commitments.

Today's column focuses on organizations who are looking for women to work in their programs.

A rape/assault centre is seeking women who can identify with a feminist perspective to join the collective who staff a 24-hour crisis line, provide emotional and practical support to survivors of rape and provide public education in this area. An extensive training session is planned for September and will involve an approximately two-month period.

After training, the accepted volunteer will decide what areas of the centre's work she wishes to become involved in and will then be asked to sign a membership contract.

A mastectomy rehabilitation program needs female volunteers who have had a mastectomy more than a year ago to visit mastectomy patients and provide information and emotional support.

Volunteers also staff information displays. Volunteer should be healthy and have adjusted to their mastectomy, with a desire to help in the paramedical field.

The time commitment may be somewhat unpredictable, varying between 3 and 12 hours per week.

If you are interested in any of today's requests or would like to find out more about other opportunities in volunteering, call the Victoria Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269. The Bureau is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Baby swap in a tangle

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — Six months ago, Marie Ferguson and Vincella Evans discovered they had been raising each other's offspring for nearly 10 years. To straighten out the mess, the mothers have taken the mixup to court.

Marie Ferguson gave birth to identical twin boys May 17, 1970. Vincella Evans became the mother of a single boy on the same day. Both were unwed teen-agers at the time.

It wasn't until about six months ago that both returned to the government's Princess Margaret Hospital and discovered they had been given the wrong infants when they left the hospital nearly 10 years ago.

Ferguson called out to a boy in the hospital corridor who looked exactly like her son. He didn't respond and denied knowing her.

That's when she discovered one of her identical twins had been given to Ms. Evans shortly after birth and Evans' son had been given to her.

In their suit filed with the Bahamas Supreme Court, the two women said they have been unable to decide their problem amicably. They said neither boy in question wants to trade mothers.

They asked the court for a legal solution.

A break through in heating efficiency

For those who have a masonry fireplace and know it sends most of the heat up the chimney. Fresh Air Fireplaces has the solution: the Renaissance Circulation System Converter. It will transform your present masonry fireplace into an efficient, economical heat source. Available in a variety of sizes, it is easily installed in the firebox of most existing fireplaces.

Its operation is simple and unique — a controlled air intake at the bottom of the unit allows fresh air to enter the hollow bottom base, where it is heated, expands and rises in tubes that direct the heat into your home, not up the chimney.

The attractive glass doors serve two purposes: they eliminate most smoke, soot and sparks from entering your home and they prevent heated room air from escaping up the chimney.

That crazy Grace she left Children

MOONEY
. . . on Broadway now

Theatregoers attending the Broadway play Talley's Folly whisper to each other: "Look! It's Sam Lucas, Lahoma's husband from Somerset," or, "Doesn't she look like the one who plays Grace in All My Children?"

Well, they're right in both cases. Jordan Charney, who spent a few years as Sam opposite Ann Wedgeworth's Lahoma in Somerset and Debra Mooney, who is crazy Grace in All My Children, are currently electrifying audiences with their performances in the Pulitzer Prize-winning play, Talley's Folly.

Debra, whose background in theatre is impressive (she has played a variety of roles ranging from Blanche du Bois in Streetcar Named Desire to Dolly Levi in The Matchmaker, really gets into playing Grace, an inmate at the institution where Anne Tyler Martin was confined.

"It's always easier to play a person who is given to flights of fancy as Grace is," said Debra. "You can let yourself go and do things as an actress that you would never do when playing someone like Sally in Talley's Folly, for instance."

Although Debra is now an extremely talented and highly respected actress, when she was attending the University of Minnesota, she wanted to teach acting, and did for a while.

That all changed, however, when a friend talked her into auditioning for a role in a local production and Debra got the lead; she was on her way.

Debra did a great deal of theatre in Minneapolis, which she calls an exciting theatre town, as well as in other parts of the country and Canada. Then it was on to New York and Off-Broadway and eventually to All My Children.

When she wasoffered the part of Sally in Talley's Folly in Chicago, she left the soap.

Now that she's on Broadway, Debra was asked to come back to All My Children. It seems like the producers were . . . saving Grace for her.

wheels

Dear Mike:

I just bought a used 1976 Buick Regal wiht 50,000 miles on it — a very clean car. It rides fine until I go over a ridge or bump in the road. The car then tends to swerve or dodge. I can feel even the slightest ripple in the steering wheel. I've had the front end aligned and the tires balanced. What could cause this odd behavior?

Swerving

Dear Swerving:

Have a front-end shop look for: 1) play in the steering linkage; 2) separated plies inside the tires; and 3) loose or worn shock absorbers.

Dear Mike:

My 1972 Matador with the 232-cid Six will idle fine when it's cold, but as soon as the engine warms up it starts to idle rough. Sometimes when it's hot, the engine also tends to stall and die. It starts fine hot or cold. Hope you cen suggest a cure.

Mad Matador

Dear Mad:

Your carburetor is either running too lean after the choke releases — or your idle adjustment might be set too low. Either way, let a good carb mechanic take a look.

Dear Mike:

I just got a flyer in the mail advertising a "revolutionary" device to reduce fuel consumption. It's a plate with little screens in it. The plate fits between the carburetor and the intake manifold. it claims to improve miles-per-gallon by 16% and also to reduce air pollution. Is it worth the $12.95 price?

Dubious

Dear Dubious:

No. If anything it'll cut your fuel mileage.

Food up 3% and going still higher

OTTAWA (UPC) — Canadians can expect to pay even higher prices for beef and pork despite an announcement by the department of agriculture that food costs have jumped by 3 per cent during the last five weeks alone.

The department said Thursday that higher prices for fresh fruit, vegetables, meat and poultry pushed food prices up to an annual rate of 12 per cent during the five-week period ending July 18.

It now costs $69.13 to feed a family of four each week — an increase of $1.37 from June. Food items that cost $1 six years ago now cost $1.86, the department said.

Continued high demand for choice beef and pork cuts during the summer barbecue season was expected to keep high prices for at least another month, the department said. Poultry, which has declined in stock, may also push up prices for pork and beef.

Beef prices rose by 2.4 per cent in July while pork, which has actually declined in cost by 0.4 per cent over the year, increased by 6.05 per cent. Meat other than beef and pork also rose by 2.4 per cent.

The announcement of continued high food prices came in the wake of Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan's decision Wednesday that industrial milk prices would be raised — pushing the price of butter up by eight cents a pound and skim milk powder five cents a pound.

The prices of cheese, yogurt and ice cream were also expected to rise as a result of the increase in cost of industrial milk, increased 58 cents to $15.26 per hundredweight.

The most expensive city in Canada to eat remained St. John's, Nfld., where it cost $77.65 a week. Montreal came in as the cheapest at $67.18, while Toronto registered a cost of $70.57 a week; Regina recorded $72.04 with Vancouver coming in at $70.64.

In the coming months, the department predicted, beef prices would be influenced upward by higher pork prices and drought that struck western Canada and the U.S. northern plains.

Pork prices, which "generally follow those in the United States," were expected to rise because of a 42 per cent price increase south of border, the department said.

But for the consumer, the culprit was fresh fruit and fresh vegetables that skyrocketed in price from the same period five weeks ago. Fruit rose by 17.2 per cent while vegetables — up almost 30 per cent in one year — increased by 17.56 per cent.

Higher prices for fresh fruit were due to a near depletion of Canadian-grown apples, with greater costs for other imported fruit such as oranges and grapefruit. However, Canadian crops of apples, peaches and pears were expected to lessen the demand for imported fruit.

Que. citizens molested here?

QUEBEC (CP) — An inquiry by a provincial official indicates Quebec citizens have been molested and humiliated in B.C. and Saskatchewan, the intergovernmental affairs department said in a brief statement Thursday.

The news release contradicted media reports that Francois Gauthier, a Quebec official in Edmonton who investigated the two incidents, had dismissed the complaints.

Gauthier has denied making that comment.

The government statement came after angry open letters to French-language newspapers here from alleged victims of discrimination in Osoyoos and Gull Lake.

Gauthier's report on the two incidents was not released.

The department said the RCMP is preparing charges against people who led a night attack against French-Canadian fruit pickers in Osoyoos.

It added that French-Canadian CP Rail employees had been discriminated against in Gull Lake, Sask., and that acts of aggression had been committed against them.

The communique added that the persons affected by the Saskatchewan incident have since left the rail gang or did not want to push matters further.

The intergovernmental affairs department said Quebec can do little to help its citizens in other provinces but will continue to offer assistance asked and will then inform the appropriate authorities.

Bitter court fight shaping up over Nfld. refinery purchase

NEW YORK (CP) — A bitter fight is shaping up in Canadian courts over Petro-Canada's decision to purchase the inactive refinery at Come By Chance, Nfld., and run it under certain conditions.

Two bids have been made for the bankrupt refinery — one signed and sealed by the Crown oil corporation and the other by oil refiner John Shaheen, who plans legal action to get the question before the Newfoundland Supreme Court.

Shaheen has offered to pay all creditors over a number of years while Petro-Canada would take care of the first mortgage holders and give the Newfoundland government, which holds a second mortgage, a 10-per-cent position. There is no provision for paying all unsecured creditors in Petro-Canada's contract.

The situation will make any disposition of the refinery, built in the early 1970s by Shaheen, even more difficult for the Newfoundland Supreme Court, which has the final say.

ROUSTED ROLLER-SKATERS Alan Jewitt (left) and Donald Stroh were ordered off the concrete in front of Toronto's City Hall Thursday. The Alberta pair were visiting Toronto on holidays and decided all that smooth surface was too good a thing to pass up. After being ejected, they commented that the ban on skating just shows how 'stuffy' Ontarians are.

Oil watchdog agency soon

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will announce soon creation of a new petroleum profits monitoring agency to keep a close watch on profits and cash movement within the industry, Energy Minister Marc Lalonde confirmed Thursday.

The new agency will have more powers than originally envisaged by the Liberal government when it first announced during the Feb. 18 election campaign it would establish such a body.

The original idea was for a price-auditing agency to help the government decide on the rate of domestic oil price increases over the next several years.

The new agency is to determine exactly how much revenue the industry should be left with to allow an acceptable level of exploration and development without providing excessive profit margins.

The government is certain to take a slice out of the industry's current 45 per cent share of each $1 a barrel oil price increase. Under the present arrangement Alberta gets another 45 per cent while Ottawa takes the remaining 10 per cent.

The industry has gathered huge profits in the first six months of 1980 and will benefit further from the $2 a barrel increase announced Thursday by Alberta and agreed to by Ottawa.

The industry argues however the present system of annual oil price increases of $2 a barrel will not provide sufficient revenue to finance continued exploration and development.

But the Canadian Petroleum Association, representing the major multinational oil firms, says it cannot be specific about how high prices should be allowed to climb, although it says the present system is not good enough.

Calgary Albertan says farewell after 78 years

By STEVE MERTL

CALGARY (CP) — The Albertan said goodbye to its readers today as its last issue went on sale.

The 78-year-old morning daily will disappear and Sunday be replaced by The Sun, a racier, more colorful tabloid.

The Sun Publishing Co. of Toronto bought The Albertan from Thomson Newspapers Ltd. in June, only a few months after Thomson took over the FP Publications Ltd. newspaper group to which The Albertan belonged.

The new paper will be the company's third Sun, after its Toronto parent and Edmonton sister.

The lead editorial, under the headline Goodbye, said the paper's disappearance "is to be lamented because each paper has a distinctive personality of its own which now will disappear.

"But there is a bright side. As The Albertan goes, The Sun will take its place. That is good news to newspaper people — and it is good news for Calgary — not least because it means that this city will still have two daily newspapers.

"The Albertan is glad the Calgary Sun will succeed it, but as it says farewell, The Albertan cannot help hope that its own memory will endure."

Editor-in-chief John Reistrup presided over the last issue.

"You can say we experienced production problems right to the end," said Reistrup, alluding to the paper's obsolete and chronically-cranky press.

Columnist Jack Tennant wrote The Albertan was not a grand old lady of Canadian journalism. She was more "a hooker trying to gain respectability but not quite succeeding."

Bureaucrat layoff policy set

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced an employee layoff policy Thursday that posed little threat to the federal public servant unions.

Treasury Board President Don Johnston announced the government will try to reduce the public service by shifting existing employees to new jobs as they come up and to positions which open up because of retirements, resignations and promotions.

However, Johnston said "it is impractical and unrealistic to believe that layoffs can be avoided entirely."

21 HELP WANTED GENERAL

RETIRED AND BORED?

You probably need the responsibility of a part-time job, close to home, where many people rely on you. The responsibility won't be more than a couple of hours daily.
Colonist routes easily delivered by walking with a cart, by bicycle or car do come available from time to time.
Reliable people of all ages, both sexes, are active each day in delivering Colonist routes.
There is much more to a Colonist route than delivering the world news to the subscriber's doorstep. Consider the following:
(1.) Additional income (from $80 to $300 per month depending on route size).
(5.) Knowing your services are needed and people are relying on you.
(6.) Record-keeping (minimal).
(7.) The accomplishment of giving an important service but retaining ample free time for other activities.
There are routes of all sizes and some apartment routes in all areas of the city. Please phone 383-4111 and ask for City Circulation. Leave your name, address and phone number and you will be contacted.

The rock pile has its rewards garden notes

As a youngster in Victoria, my older brother often took me to a Saturday matinee — or rather, his being allowed to go was contingent upon taking his sister — and more often than not his choice was one of those old prison movies that starred people like Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien.

A standard scene in such flicks was prisoners toiling on a massive rock pile and this typical scene has crossed my mind on numerous occasions this past year as we tackled the taming of our new property. Just over a year ago we moved to our first newly built house, complete with untouched grounds.

The builders left some islands of trees when they cleared the forested lot to build, fortunately, but what was cleared was still full of roots and rocks, virtually undiggable. So the first thing we did was to have one of those big machines in to dig into the cleared ground and lift up the roots lurking beneath the surface.

That done, our real work began. As we started to hand dig and pull out everything that was not soil, we soon saw that we had a rock farm on our hands. They came in every size and shape. Some were as big as garbage cans and the question was what to do with them all.

Well, we decided to use them to set off our islands of forest. We have finished a couple now and the effect is very pleasing indeed. Each oval-shaped patch of trees is ringed with a small rock wall and small rock plants perch inside the islands, along with woodland plants and flowering bulbs.

Inside the patches of trees where I could not dig and where my husband couldn't even sink his digging fork, I set up some of the larger boulders and planted flowers around them. The effect is most attractive. The smaller rocks I have used as a sort of mulch around the base of the larger trees.

In the spring some of my large boulders looked especially appealing surrounded by plantings of spring bulbs and this fall we're planning on planting even greater masses of bulb flowers.

At the edge of one sunny cleared patch we have laid plastic which we have covered with rock piled a foot or so deep. This is designed to keep weeds down and out of the neighbor's yard.

It is also going to be a squash and melon ripening area. With squash and melons planted beside this rock bank, the fruits can ripen warmly and cleanly on top of the rocks — providing, of course, that we get some sun and warmth in the late summer and early fall to make up for what we didn't get earlier in the season.

Our bulldozer friend lifted up some huge boulders that are unmovable. One is in the middle of our main vegetable garden and we have named it "Respite Rock" and look upon it as a place to stop our labors and rest. It has the butt-end of a log scrounged from the beach to be used as a seat to help it live up to its name.

Another unbudgable lies to the side of a wide path leading to the top of the property. It's in a nice sunny spot so I've decided to feature it at the centre of some slightly oriental plantings in the form of a dwarf Korean lilac and two Japanese tree peonies.

I have one garden bed that needed to be divided in two — one side for an experimental garden, the other for special plants bequeathed to us from my parents' garden. I chose some of the most attractive rocks to define a wide path in between the two sections.

Our son has a tree fort in one piece of forest and at the entrance to this, his special domain, we managed to roll two of the largest boulders, one on each side, monuments to his own private world. One of them is set off by a bleeding heart, his favorite flower, which has been doing just famously in this shady spot.

If there is some sort of horticultural moral to this little saga, I suppose it would be to go with what you've got — whether it's bricks, sawdust, railroad ties or rock — and think and read until you find some imaginative way to use that you already have to enhance your outdoor environment.

As a matter of fact, looking at our garden now, I often wonder just what we would have done if we didn't have all those boulders. Probably would have had to buy some!

Paper wins award

TORONTO (CP) — The Agassiz Advance has won first prize for tabloid newspapers with a circulation under 2,000 in the Canadian Community Newspapers Association's Better Newspapers competition.

End to 'British subject' proposed

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government has proposed a complicated new nationality law which would have three categories of citizens, only one of which would have an automatic right to live in Britain.

Government proposals published say that the term "British subject," covering some 950 million people in the world, living mostly in Commonwealth countries, would no longer be used.

The three new categories are: British citizenship for people closely connected with the United Kingdom, who could reside in the country as of right; citizenship of the British dependent territories, and British overseas citizenship for remaining citizens of the United Kingdom and its colonies.

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNTHING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNTHING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter. SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist.
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNTHING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNTHING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game rules.
5. As a condition of receiving prizes, recipients agree to allow publication of their names and pictures in the Colonist or Times for no additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all rules. No prize substitutions.
6. The contest is open to all readers of the Daily Colonist and Victoria Times on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Employees of Victoria Press and their immediate families are not eligible to enter.
7. In fairness to all, the Colonist or Times cannot answer questions or respond to phone calls or letters regarding THE SUMMERFUNTHING CONTEST.
8. All winners will be determined by a random draw from all valid entries.

HOW TO ENTER

Complete the puzzle and fill in the "PASSWORD" on the entry form. Clip out the entry form and send it to us in an envelope with the puzzle number printed in the top left hand corner of the envelope. (As illustrated.)

Be sure to include your name, address and phone number on the entry form.

Enter as many times as you wish but make sure each entry is in a separate envelope.

Police thrust calms riot-scarred Orlando

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Stepped-up police patrols in the city's riot-scarred black neighborhoods resulted in 30 arrests during the third consecutive night of looting, rock and bottle throwing. The county sheriff was slightly hurt in an attack on an unmarked prowl car.

Police, eager to stop further violence in the tourist town near Disney World, took a tougher stance Thursday night, appearing on city streets with weapons and wearing helmets with riot shields. At least 30 arrests were reported.

The situation early today was described as quiet.

A police spokesman said intensified patrols and vehicular sweeps through the 20-block cordoned-off area kept gangs of black youths at bay and largely prevented a repeat of the violent outbursts that rocked the area the two preceding nights.

During the night, Orange County Sheriff Melvin Coleman was cut slightly on the cheek when bottles and rocks shattered windows of an unmarked police car he was riding in with Public Safety Director Harold McClain.

But Coleman's minor injury and the looting of a 7-Eleven store in another black section of town were the most serious incidents of the evening, police said.

Police kept a low profile during the first two nights of the rock and bottle throwing by about 150 blacks in their teens and early 20s, but opted for a tougher strategy Thursday. Wearing riot gear, they moved in quickly when neighborhood crowds began to form.

During the three-day spree that saw a pattern of violence emerge as night fell, five businesses were set on fire, several others were vandalized and at least 75 people were arrested. At least 10 suffered injuries, none of them serious.

The disturbances were touched off shortly after midnight Tuesday when police went to arrest a black woman charged with stealing $600 from the pocket of a white man. Blacks also complained of police brutality, poor housing and a lack of job opportunities.

Even after it escalated Wednesday night, local officials refused to order a curfew, saying the renegade element involved would not obey such a restriction and that a curfew would be an "insult" to the law-abiding members of both the black and white communities.

Orlando is the third Florida city in two months to suffer the effects of racial unrest, but officals visibly cringed at the comparison and said the trouble was nothing compared to riots in Miami in May that killed 18.

Tampa also had three nights of disturbances in May, and last week there was racial violence in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Billy Carter told Justice Department investigators he knew international arms dealer Francis E. Terpil, currently under indictment here and in New York, and had been asked by Terpil to help export machine-guns, The Washington Star has learned.

Although Billy Carter also said in January he had been contacted in Americus, Ga., by Terpil about the machine-gun deal, the president's brother two months later denied any knowledge of Terpil, several congressmen and other sources familiar with Justice Department records told the Star.

On March 20, during a telephone conversation with Joel S. Lisker, chief of the Justice Department's foreign agent registration unit, Billy Carter denied having any knowledge of Terpil. But during a Jan. 16 interview he had identified the arms dealer as the man sitting at his right in a picture taken of the parade review stand at the 10th-anniversary celebration of the Libyan revolution in Benghazi, Libya.

Terpil faces trial here on federal charges related to allegations that he conspired at Libya's request in 1976 to assassinate a former Libyan politician exiled in Eygpt. He also is scheduled to be tried in New York for trying to sell 10,000 machine-guns and ammunition to undercover agents.

Meanwhile, President Jimmy Carter Thursday released copies of seven apparently innocuous state department cables on his brother Billy's visit to Libya and sought to discount any suggestion that the president gave his brother sensitive government information.

And Billy Carter, reversing statements he made a day earlier, acknowledged today that someone in the White House gave him a state department cable concerning his 1978 trip to Libya.

Asked who gave him the cable, Carter replied, "I assume I got it from someone in the White House." Asked if that person was the president, he replied: "I won't comment on that directly. It was over a year ago and I don't remember."

Also on Thursday, a U.S. Senate sub-committee announced hearings will begin Monday in its investigation of Billy Carter's connection with Libya.

The panel left open the possibility that it will hear from the president if he insists on testifying before the Democratic national convention on the controversy surrounding his younger brother — although sub-committee chairman Senator Birch Bayh (Dem—Ind.), and vice-chairman Senator Strom Thurmond (Rep.—S.C.) said it would be better if Carter testified later.

The fast-moving developments fuelled even further the fires of speculation surrounding the political future of the president, who is trailing badly in current public opinion polls and under strong pressure from some quarters to release his delegates so the Aug. 11 Democratic national convention in New York could be "open."

The speculation took another twist Thursday when Representative John Anderson said he might abandon his independent campaign for the presidency if Senator Edward Kennedy were to win the Democratic presidential nomination for the November election.

But in an emotional meeting today with Democratic members of the House of Representatives, Carter described efforts to open up the convention as a travesty and vowed he would not release his delegates to vote as they choose. Based on pre-convention balloting, Carter has a 315-delegate lead over Kennedy.

The open convention is endorsed by a group of Democratic congressmen who say they would like to give the delegates a chance to choose someone other than Carter or Kennedy.

On the other hand, a number of Democrats have rallied behind Carter, including former Attorney General Griffin Bell who said this week that attempts to force an "open" convention amounted to a "breach of trust" of voters who cast ballots in the Democratic presidential primaries.

There has been talk of the Democrats' coming up with a compromise "third candidate" — such as Secratary of State Edmund Muskie.

A press conference that had been scheduled today in Washington to announce formation of a movement to draft Muskie for president was abruptly cancelled Thursday after Muskie associates indicated it "not only could hurt his chances but alienate Carter delegates who don't want their candidate stolen away by a Muskie candidacy."

DUBLIN (AP) — An Irish express train packed with summer vacationers jumped the rails today, killing 10 people and injuring hundreds, police said.

The train, from Dublin to Cork, was derailed near the small town of Bullevant, about 50 kilometres north of its destination. No other train was involved.

Rescuers cut through the wreckage of 12 cars strewn across the tracks and freed about 270 trapped passengers. Police said almost all the 400 passengers on board suffered some injury. Twenty-six were reported to be in serious condition.

Ambulances from surrounding towns ferried the dead and injured to hospitals at Cork and nearby Mallow, 12 km away.

Witnesses said the crash occurred near where a group of men was working on the line, but this could not be immediately confirmed.

Victoria Times

97th YEAR, No. 46 * * VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 1980 25 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

Payoff puzzle
This week's prize $1200

Announcement

Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist will be merged on September 2 to become the Times-Colonist.

As an all-day newspaper, the Times-Colonist will continue to publish a morning paper and an evening paper, and subscribers will receive home delivery on the same days as at present.

Today magazine, previously included with only the Times, will be received by morning paper subscribers as well on Saturday. Color comics will also be included on Saturday in both papers.

The six-day home delivery price of $5.00 a month will remain the same but the newsstand price of the Saturday paper, with enlarged content, will be increased 5¢ to 35¢. The Sunday paper, which will continue to include The Islander, will remain at 30¢ at newsstands.

Under the all-day paper publishing schedule, each paper will contain the latest news and sport in its time period. The weekday evening edition will be revised and updated to present all the news which occurred after the morning edition was published.

The new schedule will also permit expanded coverage of local news, sports and entertainment, as well as the introduction of new features. Additional details will be announced in the weeks ahead.

Statement

The familiar question of whether two daily newspapers can survive in Victoria has taken on added urgency in recent years.

Victoria Press, like most other companies, has been hit by rising costs in almost every area of its operation. The fundamental problem is that we have the expense of producing two different daily newspapers — Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist — with the revenue base of one newspaper.

Over the years we have had to cut costs to preserve our present format. The size of each paper's editorial department was reduced. Various features and pages such as travel, book reviews, church news and court reporting became identical in both papers.

These were stop-gap measures. While the distinctiveness of each paper was eroded, the basic two-paper dilemma of high costs and a large total staff was not resolved. In addition, neither paper had the resources to provide ample news coverage of Greater Victoria and the Island.

The effect of escalating costs and diminishing editorial coverage also resulted in Victoria Press becoming more vulnerable to competitors. Newspapers have no immunity from the realities of business life, nor should they. If our present situation continues, our future becomes increasingly less certain.

Cost factors have made two-paper cities a rarity in North America. Where two do exist, one is nearly always losing money and in danger of closing. However, Victoria has had a morning paper since 1858 and an evening paper since 1884. We feel strongly that this tradition should be maintained.

We can meet this objective, and at the same time improve editorial quality and achieve stability by producing an all-day newspaper.

This step, to take effect on September 2, will see the two papers merged to form the Times-Colonist, with a morning edition and an evening edition. Details are included in the announcement above, but days of publication will not be changed and subscribers will receive home delivery on the same days as at present.

The new publishing format will require fewer employees, but the effect will not be nearly so great as conversion to a single paper.

The Times-Colonist will combine the best features of both papers and, with a larger editorial staff than either paper now has, will provide expanded and improved coverage of local news, sports and entertainment. As stronger and more vigorous papers, they will be better able to fill their proper role in the community and ensure their long-term survival.

COLIN D. McCULLOUGH,
VICTORIA PRESS.

Family Act revamped

Broad new powers over persons to 19 included

New powers — including entering a home without a warrant — are given provincial government child welfare officials in legislation introduced today by Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy.

A new Family and Child Services Act establishes a position of superintendent of family and child services, replacing the superintendent of child welfare under the present act.

The superintendent will be allowed to take into custody any child under 19 in need of protection. Present age limit is 17.

If access to a child is denied, he may apply for a warrant to enter and investigate the home.

If he thinks the child needs immediate protection he may enter without a warrant.

However, in every case where a child is taken into custody, the action must be reviewed by a court within a specific time. In fact, all actions will be subjected to judicial review and approval.

The superintendent will also be able to enter into an agreement on a wide variety of arrangements for child care, inside or outside the home.

For example, a family requiring temporary assistance in caring for a child can enter into an agreement with the superintendent for short-term care and custody of the child outside the home.

Or on a long-term arrangement, the superintendent may have custody of the child while the parents continue as legal guardians. The act requires the superintendent to investigate all reports of a child who may be in need of protection.

The new act clarifies the duty of every citizen who has reasonable grounds to believe a child may be in need of protection to report the circumstances to the superintendent.

This responibility overrides claims of professional confidentiality.

McCarthy said the act will change the focus such legislation has had in the past.

Instead of dealing only with the state's responsibility for the protection of children, the act acknowledges the role of the family.

"Instead of treating the state and parents as adversaries, it makes provision for them to work together in maintaining the integrity of the family and sharing the burden of caring for children with special problems or needs," the minister said.

The act gives every child the right to protection from abuse and neglect. However, it avoids setting out such rights as "affection, love and understanding."

These terms are included in the United Nations Declaration of the Rights of the Child, but they cannot be enforced by law, McCarthy said.

Fire guts house, killing man, 23

One person was killed but four others escaped unharmed when fire swept through a small, single-storey house at 3114 Steele in the Burnside district early today.

Dead is Glen Charlie Thomas, 23, of 245 Wilson.

City police said Thomas, his sister Ina Thomas, 30, of 3116 Steele, and Wayne Seitcher, 18, of Port Alberni, were visiting Victoria Seitcher and Rose Peters, both 20, and occupants of the house when the fire broke out shortly after 1 a.m.

A neighbor turned in the alarm but the house was engulfed when firemen arrived.

Police and firemen had to restrain the four who got out from re-entering the burning building to save Thomas.

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — The multi-billion dollar motion picture and television industry, already beset by an 11-day-old actor's strike, has a second work stoppage on its hands Thursday.

The American Federation of Musicians broke off negotiations with major film and TV producers Thursday evening. They officially went on strike at midnight Thursday.

The strike will idle some 5,000 musicians nationwide who work on the scoring of movies and filmed TV programs. The rest of the unions' 300,000 members also will be prohibited from engaging in such work for the duration of the strike.

AFM president Victor Fuentealba said a "total impasse" with the producers' negotiating committee occurred Thursday evening, leading the union to break off the talks.

However, the deadlock did not come over payments from the new home video markets of pay TV, cassettes and discs, the issue that triggered the strike by the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

Instead, Fuentealba said, the deadlock came when musicians insisted on receiving payments for reruns of films and TV programs.

Curtis glum despite $234.9M surplus

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis released the first quarterly financial report of the 1980-81 fiscal year Thursday showing a $234.9 million surplus and then said — in effect — it should be disregarded.

According to the report, the province was actually in better financial shape at the end of June than had been originally predicted in the record $5.8 billion budget introduced in March.

However Curtis said this is not the true picture. His experts have detected economic danger signals, the situation is expected to deteriorate in the coming months and the government's recent belt-tightening measures were entirely justified.

Nevertheless the minister said by exercising continued restraint he still expects to end the year with a balanced budget.

The province's quarterly surplus of $234.9 million, compared to a forecast surplus of $252.3 million.

That means the budgetary balance sheet fell $17.4 million short of expectations.

That is the equivalent of 0.34 per cent of the total budget.

Lumping budgetary and non-budgetary items together, the report shows over-all expenditures exceeded revenues by $118.9 million during the first quarter.

However the forecast had been for an over-all deficit of $135.4 million for the April-June period.

Therefore the government was $16.5 million better off over-all than had been predicted.

The most significant factor in the report, Curtis said, is a 25 per cent drop in petroleum and natural gas revenues including a $33 million shortfall in revenue from the B.C. Petroleum Corp.

The report predicts that shortfall could total $150 million by the end of the fiscal year.

This, together with a projected slump in forest revenues and the continuing recession in the U.S., add up to the minister's indicators of tougher times ahead.

Assailant tees off

A Mill Bay man has been charged with two counts of assault causing bodily harm after two men, including pro golfer Bill Wakeham, were injured this week after being struck by a man wielding a golf club, RCMP said today.

A police spokesman said Wakeham was taken to hospital in Victoria with head injuries after he was clubbed with a driver Sunday in the pro shop at Cowichan Golf Club.

Wakeham, the local club pro, was released from hospital in good condition.

Clifford Horsfall, 37, of 1048 Briarwood Cres. is to appear in provincial court in Duncan Aug. 26.

Parrot smooths CUPW split

OTTAWA (CP) — The Quebec members of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers were accused of blackmailing co-workers from other regions of the country today as president Jean-Claude Parrot restored order to their national convention which nearly collapsed Thursday night.

Parrot, who was acclaimed president for a second three-year term today, presented a compromise package of proposals aimed at getting the convention back on the rails following a nearly all-night emergency sitting of the union's executive to cope with a deep split that emerged when the Quebec delegation walked out in a protest.

He got permission from the majority of 283 delegates to suspend regular rules for a debate on the compromise package despite charges that postal workers from the Atlantic, Ontario and the West were being deprived of their democratic rights so that the Quebecers would return to the convention floor.

Parrot refused to go ahead without the Quebecers who kept the convention waiting more than an hour as they assembled early in the morning for the final day of their five-day triennial convention.

Parrot appealed for unity, accused unnamed individuals of trying to divide the union and warned, "We've got a damned fight coming with our employer again and we're going to need solidarity."

The compromise package reduced the convention debate to a handful of compromise proposals on key contentious issues, including the one that had prompted the Quebec protest.

The Quebecers walked out after the union adopted, by a vote of 136 to 118, a policy under which the union's national directors could reimburse union members for wages they lose when they miss work to attend union area council meetings.

The opponents said it would be grossly expensive and open to abuse.

Union sources said some leaders of delegations from the different regions of the country got carried away in wheeling and dealing for alliances on controversial issues and that the vote backfired on the Quebec group.

The city's first official marathon will be staged Sept. 20 but the entry deadline is Sept. 1, exactly one month away.

Entry forms are available at various locations and organizers expect the race, along Beach Drive, will rank as the largest sporting event ever staged in Victoria.

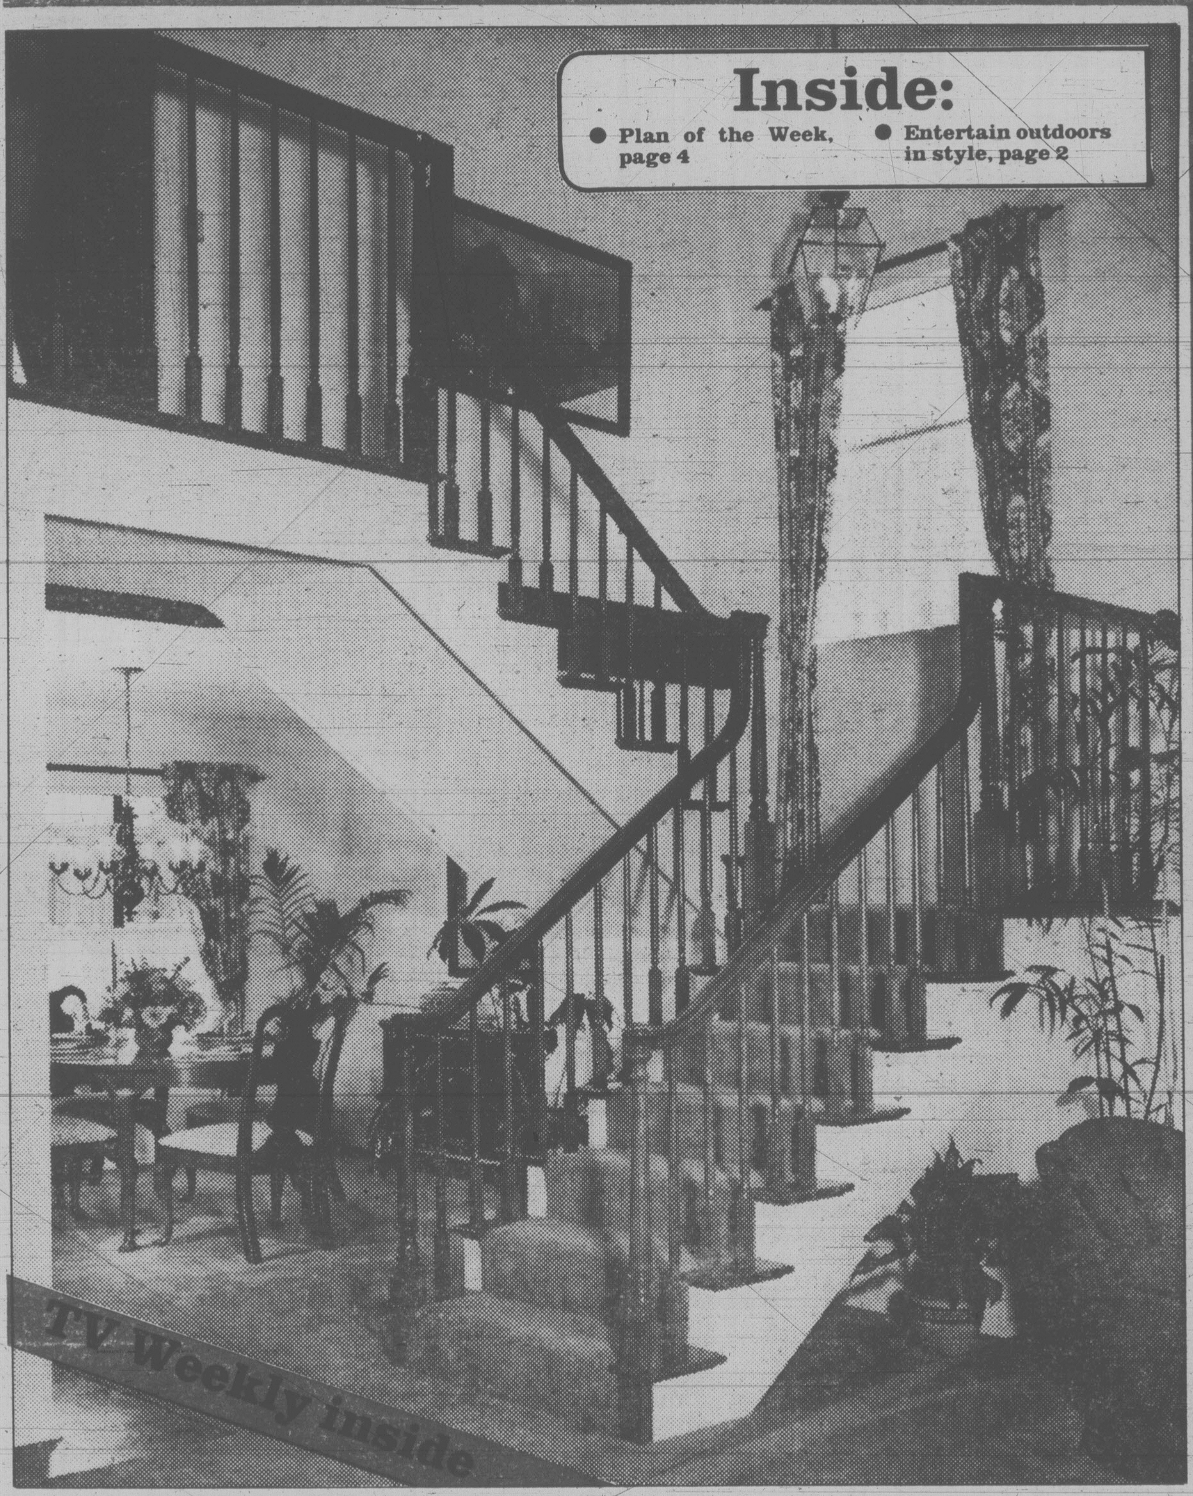
A stairway functions as a wall

By PAULINE GRAVES



Inside:

TV Weekly inside

The open plan, or areas that flow together, offer one guaranteed spacemaking illusion. And a prime example is shown here. Ordinarily a wall would separate the dining room, in the background, and the living room, foreground, with a stairway built against that wall. But the wall performs no function other than total separation, and this was not desired. Eliminating the wall left the stairway as a handsome divider. In fact, it stands almost as an architectural sculpture, much more dramatic than if it were against a wall.

Another bonus is that the dining area gains in attractiveness as viewed from the living room. The stairway, as it ascends and then doubles back, frames the dining group, which give it depth and importance. And because the stairway blocks just part of the space between living room and dining room, both rooms seem larger than their actual size.

YOU CAN MAKE IT!

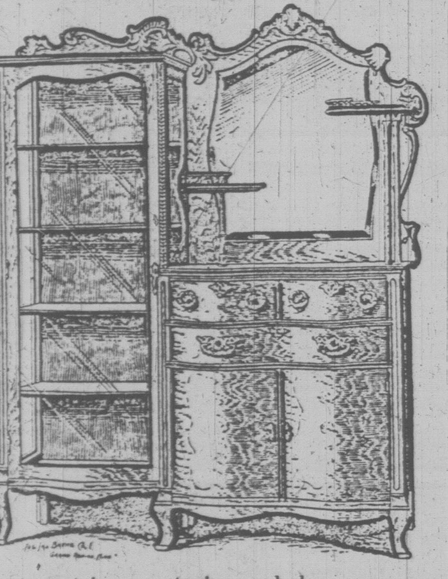
By Steve Ellingson

This unique dining table-buffet has been designed for convenience. It's a serving table . . . a bar . . a storage centre. Everything you need for enjoyable entertaining in a single package you can build yourself. The dining table buffet consists of three units — a drop-leaf table and two rolling carts. When the drop leaf is down, the whole thing takes up a space of only 2' by 6' by 30¼''. With the leaf up, there's a 39'' wide table top and serving space. Then there's that precious under-the-counter space. One cart has three roomy shelves. Both can double as serving units to supplement the main table, or function independently as TV as snack carts. Step-by-step instructions and plenty of drawings make this project a snap for the do-it-yourselfer. Basic woodworking tools, a sabre saw and exterior-grade plywood are all you need to entertain in style.

To obtain Plan No. 576, Dining Table Buffet, send $4.50 (please add 50 cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to: Victoria Press, Pattern Dept., Box 160, Cote St. Luc, Montreal, Que. H4V 2X3.

DRESSERS

Antique Furniture File



Asymmetric secretaries and dressers were made by the thousands around the turn of the century. For some reason this popularity has been rejuvenated in the last few years and collectors are paying top prices for them. Although the dresser shown here has not reached maturity (100 years), the going price is in the $300-$500 range.

APARTMENT LIVING

Selecting lamps requires care

By LESLIE AYERS
Copley News Service

In addition to providing you with the lighting you need, lamps can be a vital decorating accessory in an apartment.

When selecting lamps for a room, be sure that they relate to the style, color and mood of the other furnishings. The selection need not be limited just to contemporary lamps in a contemporary room or to one single period style for all of the lamps. However, an artful combination of materials should be considered to add zest to a room.

The scale of the lamp should relate to the furniture around it. For example, don't flank a massive sofa with dainty lamps. Try also to create a contrast between the table top and the material of the lamp base. This does much to create a more interesting effect.

For a contemporary or eclectic room, you might consider lamps of chrome, glass, molded plastic, pottery, rope, wicker or the bright lacquer ceramic lamps.

For the provincial, Early American or Mediterranean room, lamps should be a little more rustic in flavor.

They might be made of pewter, copper, wood, wrought iron, brass or handcrafted pottery. You can find a wealth of objects in antique shops which can easily be wired as novelty lamps. Tea canisters, wine jugs and large coffee grinders are a few examples.

Lamps that would be most appropriate for a period or formal room would be made of crystal, silver, porcelain, bronze and glass.

When selecting lamps for your apartment, keep in mind that a living room can use approximately three to five lamps. The amount will vary depending on whether recessed or tract lighting is used in the same room.

The heights of the lamps are important. If you use five or six lamps in one room and they are all different heights, the effect will be one of confusion. A good solution might be to use two matching sofa lamps, one standing lamp and a small accent lamp on a sofa table or commode.

The important thing is to plan the lighting so that it enhances each room of your apartment.

BATH LIGHT

The most neglected room as far as efficient lighting is concerned is the bathroom. Even in new houses or condominiums, a tiny fixture over the medicine cabinet is expected to provide sufficient lighting for a close shave or a glamourous make-up.

In order to give shadowless light, a bathroom mirror should have a lighting fixture on either side and one in the ceiling above the head to illuminate all of the face equally, it is recommended. Track lighting is ideal for this purpose, because it is not stationary like other fixtures. It can be moved along its track on the ceiling and swiveled around to focus wherever necessary.

Four-level kids' tree house

By MELISSA GRANT
Copley News Service

It's terrific to climb on, slide down and scramble over. With four levels, the possibilities are enormous.

While you may not have enough room in your back yard for such a monstrosity (or the energy to build it), you might want to build a smaller model for your kids.

It's not all that difficult — even if the closest you've ever been to building one was watching your dad at work and telling him to hurry up.

First and foremost, you'll need a tree — preferably a big one with sturdy branches. Choose the tree carefully so there will be enough support and enough room for the "house."

Consider the size and age of your children. For younger children, you'll want to build as close to the ground as possible. Even a "fort" under the tree can be exciting and fun for them.

Then, as the children grow, you can add another higher level in the tree. Maybe after awhile they will have a four-storey tree house.

You'll need steps into the tree house. You can make these by nailing thick boards to the tree at appropriate distances and remember to place them for the children's steps — not yours (2x4s work pretty well).

Of course if you're being elaborate, you can build a regular set of stairs into the tree. If you're not too energetic, take that old ladder you've got and nail it to the tree!

Next, you'll need a sturdy floor. The way this is built depends somewhat on the support available from the tree branches.

But let's say you have the trunk and two branches (reasonably horizontal) to work with.

The floor needs proper support — this accomplished with help of the tree and some sturdy boards.

Nail a 2x10 horizontally to the tree trunk (about 20 inches long) more or less where you want the floor to be.

Nail a 2x10 on each side of the branches, using a board and level to make sure that when you're finished the floor will be level. These two by 10s should also be 20 inches long.

Next, you will want to place the basic foundation for the floor.

Two-by-10s, again, are the strongest: measure the distance across from each of the branches to the trunk — you'll be making a triangle with the boards — cut three boards of right length, and place these on top of the 2x10s you've nailed to the tree. You'll probably need to cut the boards at an angle to fit. Nail securely.

That finished, you can lay the floor. Heavy plywood in a sheet or thinner boards about four inches wide should do.

Place these on top of the "foundation" and nail securely.

The hardest work, as in all projects, is in the planning stage and figuring how much wood you'll need and its placement.

After the floor is laid, you will probably want to add a railing around the house. Again, consider the size of your kids: the railing should be at the right height for them.

Make sure that the kids (if they're older) help you out on the project. It'll make it seem more their own — and maybe they'll understand why you don't want to add a roof!

Here's a solid and traditional brick bungalow which is perfectly suited to the narrow-to-medium frontage residential building lot, and which posesses a roomy 1,372 square feet of well-arranged finished floor area. It also boasts a full basement, allowing the growing family to increase its useable living accommodations by developing additional bedrooms and/or recreational facilities in the future as space requirements and tastes change.

The traditional exterior, finished in brick veneer with shingle roof, has charming small-paned windows and full-length shutters, and presents a smart but reserved facade which would not be out of place in any residential development.

The wide, elevated entry leads into a large and open reception foyer, from which traffic moves directly forward and down into the large sunken living room. The living room features a wide sliding glass walk-through which leads onto the large rear patio, and a corner-positioned, raised-hearth masonry fireplace. The living room separates from the formal dining room via two risers and an optional spindle screen wall.

A well-arranged U-shape kitchen is centrally positioned between the formal dining room and the commodious dinette area, providing for excellent separation of formal dining, when entertaining, and more off-hand family meals. The kitchen and dining area may be totally isolated from the main living and entertaining area for privacy and hygiene.

All three bedrooms are positioned to one side of the floor plan, and well away from the entertaining area for freedom from disturbance. Each has generous closet storage and excellent exposure for view and natural light. The large master suite has a two-piece vanity bath and a sliding glass walk-through leading onto the two-tiered rear balcony.

A convenient laundry storage and stacked washer and dryer are located behind louvred bi-fold doors across from the main bath and sensibly close to the bedrooms.

An enclosed two car garage, with space for the installation of a workshop for the home handyman, completes the convenience features of this stylish and high-tone home design.

PANDORA AVENUE

Pandora Avenue, one of Victoria's principal east-west thoroughfares, was named for Queen Victoria's surveying vessel Pandora, captained by Lieut.-Cmdr. James Wood.

When H.M.S. Pandora cruised this coast Victoria was just a fort. There were a few settlers along nearby shores, but other than that the whole coast was wilderness.

The Pandora, tender to H.M.S. Herald, reached Esquimalt in 1845. After charting the waters, harbours, bays and inlets around the Island, making them safe for future vessels, she returned to England in the autumn of 1848.

Besides Pandora Avenue, which bears her name, this picturesque vessel is commemorated in Pandora Peak at Port San Juan, Pandora Hill on Discovery Island, and Pandora Head in Drury Inlet.

ENERGYSAVE

(This is the last of seven articles on do-it-yourself energy conservation in which writer Peter Tonge gives tips on plugging energy leaks in your home, tapping and storing solar heat, and insulating your home and your body.)

By PETER TONGE
(The Christian Science Monitor News Service)

Wendy Grayson grew up in the United States during those years (1940-1970) when the acceptable winter indoor temperature rose steadily from the mid-60s to the mid-70s. Light clothing indoors was the rule all year. When anyone felt cold, a quick adjustment of the thermostat solved the problem.

Then eight years ago she and her husband moved to England and quickly learned how warm a sweater, cardigan, jumper or pullover could make one feel in an otherwise cool house. "We didn't have a thermostat to reach for," he recalls, and now if they did she still wouldn't run a hot house. Though individual space heaters warm parts of the home when needed she has learned that the "only way to go" in the present costly energy situation is "to dress appropriately."

Dressing appropriately indoors now is returning to the United States as well. Sweater sales are up everywhere, and there is a marked preference for natural fibres — wool, cotton, linen — that are both warmer in winter and cooler in summer than artificial fibers. On the other hand, a good case can be made for a blend of natural and man-made fibres, say clothiers. It is the item of clothing made completely from heat-conducting artificial fibre that is on its way out, they add.

Other comfort-promoting options, too, are turning up on the market. Massachusetts residents Jean and Sven Casperson are just two among thousands who have discovered the "snug sack" or "snuggle blanket" as it sometimes is called. In their opinion it's the "best thing to come down the pike in a long while." Still others are discovering, or rediscovering, the delights of the hot-water bottle and that other tried-and-tested option, the comforter. In some instances sweat suits, made for the athlete, are turning up on totally nonathletic persons — in lieu of a bathrobe — because the more snug-fitting track garment traps body heat so much more effectively. Another increasingly accepted keep-warm option: a little mild exercise.

When we dress to keep warm or put blankets and comforters on beds, we simply are insulating ourselves so that body heat loss is slowed down. Dr. Ralph F. Goldman of the U.S. Army Ergonomic Laboratory in Natick, Mass., likes to stress the fact that insulation is dead-air space, not fibre. The fibre in our clothing merely is there to enclose this dead air.

"It is the air in the fibreglass insulation bats, not the glass itself, that insulates our houses," he points out. So, the more dead, dry air we can surround ourselves with, the warmer we will feel in winter. This is the reason why several layers of thinner materials generally are better than one thick garment: besides the air that is trapped between the fibres of the garments, a thin skin of insulating air also is formed between each layer of clothing. Another obvious plus for the layered-clothing approach: it is easier to regulate personal comfort by peeling off thin layers of clothing, say a light sweater, than by removing one heavy jacket. The same can be said for bedclothes — several thin blankets are better than one thick one. But don't confuse a blanket with a thick comforter. The correctly made comforter is loaded with light, air-trapping foams of fibres.

As a general rule, for every pound of clothing we wear we can turn down the thermostat 1 to 2 degrees F and remain comfortable. More specifically, one lightweight, long-sleeve sweater equals 1.7 degrees, according to Goldman; a heavy sweater, 3.7 degrees. But two lightweight sweaters add 5 degrees of comfort because of the additional dead-air space between the two garments.

If your home or office really is cool, wear a hat. That's because, army experiments show, more heat is lost through the head (in extremely frigid conditions as much as 90 per cent) than any other part of the body. This isn't always recognized because we don't necessarily feel uncomfortable losing heat this way until we are cold all over. So it makes sense to plug that heat loss. Goldman suggests a hat has the same effect on the central pool of heat in the human body as the stopper has on the hot drink in the thermos bottle. In the days before central heating, Victorians never bothered to calculate the radiating capacity of the head but they did know a good thing when they wore one — the night cap which accompanied them to bed on winter evenings.

Hot air rises, so a fair amount of body heat is lost at the neckline and also from the sleeve cuff as well. For this reason people stay a good deal warmer wearing high-neck, snug-fitting garments, such as turtlenecks, for the same reason a man stays warmer by wearing a tie. Wear clothes that fit snugly at the sleeve cuffs, too.

While two garments generally out-perform one in heat retention, there is an exception to that rule: two pairs of socks crammed into the same size shoe will leave you with colder feet than if you wore one pair of socks. That is because they are compressed in a tight shoe so that the dead air is squeezed out. What you then have left, according to Goldman, is "more fibre, and fibre on its own conducts heat away from the body." On the other hand, two pairs of socks worn with shoes one size larger is an "excellent idea," according to Goldman.

One of the newer stay-warm options to hit the market in recent years is the snug rug. Patterned somewhat after a sleeping bag, it is designed for use during the waking hours. It enfolds the wearer like a cocoon but can be fastened so that the arms are free for working. It also can be quickly unzipped to free the feet for walking. For added comfort in a really cold room, throw in a hot-water bottle. Peoplewho recently invested in snug rugs now find they can read, enjoy TV, write leters or do any of a number of sitting tasks in much cooler temperatures. The snug rug's one drawback, say the Caspersons, is its comfort. "It's just too easy to go to sleep in."

Remember, insulation, no matter how good, never retains heat indefinitely. "It merely slows down the passage of heat," says Goldman. In other words, if you sit still for a long period of time you eventually will feel chilly no matter how good the snug sack or what have you. Drinking something warm will help, but a little exercise is more effective. Cutting the wood, as the saying goes, warms you more than sitting in front of the resulting fire.

Powell Street

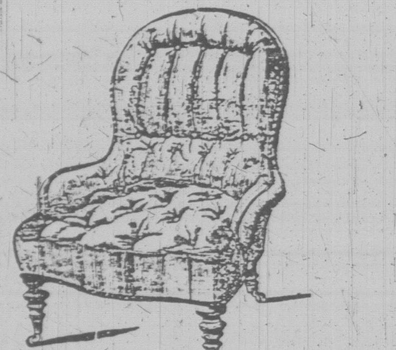
Powell Street, in James Bay, was named for Dr. Israel Wood Powell, one of the medical men of early-day Victoria.

Dr. Powell was born at Port Colborne, Upper Canada, in 1836, graduated from McGill, and came to Victoria in 1862. He became interested in politics and was one of the leaders in the fight to have B.C. join Canada, which came about in 1871.

It was Dr. Powell who built "Oakdene," today "Bishop's Close" of Christ Church Cathedral. He and his wife lived to mark their golden wedding. He died in 1915 and Mrs. Powell in 1928.

CHAIRS

Antique Furniture File



The popular Turkish styles led to the development of the "overstuffed" furniture produced in the 4th quarter of the 19th century. In the one shown here, we see vestiges of the French revival modified by the minimal use of wood. Since the fabric was the most perishable part, few pieces of antique "overstuffed" furniture have survived the ravages of time. Heretofore, the cost of re-upholstering these pieces has been disproportionate to their value. However, now that they are reaching maturity (100 years), the picture has changed and a re-upholstered "overstuffed" chair or sofa has become more practical. The value of a chair similar to the one shown here would be in the $300-$500 range.

DECOR SCORE

A spare room for the boys

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have an extra bedroom upstairs I'd like to create for our young grandsons who visit us frequently and for extended stays during vacations. They're 5 and 6. I don't want to invest a large amount but I'd like the room to be theirs and pleasant. The room is very small — about 8 x 13 feet.

A. You might consider built-in beds — bunks would be the only practical way to go — for your grandsons.

Paint the walls a soft lemon-yellow. That's a good basic color for nearly any room. A light gold or medium-gold carpeting would be good and plenty of decorating drama could be supplied by throw bedspreads of bright coral or orange.

If you need storage for them, consider drawers under the lower bed and boxes that stack and can be painted alternating tones of yellow and coral or orange. Use some of the bedspread fabric at the windows for simple draperies or curtains. Trim the draperies with a braid of yellow.

Q. I'm about to go shopping for carpeting. What styles and kinds are available today and best for a frequently used room? — W.I.M.

A. Multi-level is a type with a texture — usually two or more levels of pile height. One level might be a loop and another a cut pile. This style is extremely practical and helps conceal soil and wear. A level loop is similar to the multi-level, only it contains simply one loop and gives a less-textured look. It isn't as good at concealing soil but it may be preferable if you want to get away from a distracting pattern of the multi-level.

Then there are shags, the long pile that gives a casual, informal look that has been popular. However, shags have drawbacks. They are difficult to vacuum and they show traffic patterns. If you do select a shag be certain there is plenty of yarn in the carpeting so the material will not quickly mat down.

Take a look at the plush, the most elegant of carpet textures that gives you a velvet look. It is a style where the loops made on the loom have been cut to a uniform short height to give a tight, uniform surface. it does show traffic patterns and is not as practical as a multi-level carpeting. It's especially luxurious in a bedroom or a living room (if you have a family room to take heavy wear off the living room). If you don't have the family room, consider the more practical multi-level in a solid color.

West coast way of building houses on steep slopes adapted by eastern builders

The Christian Science Monitor News Service.

On the West Coast, homes perched on steep slopes are often built on poles, and Charleston architect Paul Marshall has proved that the idea can work in the East, as well.

He adapted the concept for a home site in The Appalachians.

Developer Earl Stalnaker first approached Marshall about the possibility of designing a house for the sloping wooded site which many Eastern lopers would view as unbuildable. "Its location three miles from downtown and close to an elementary school seemed to be desirable," he explained.

It was just the challenge Marshall had been waiting for.

"I had made a trip to California some years back," said the architect, a Charleston native who recalled seeing the pole house concept there and in architectural magazines. "I always considered it an answer to unbuildable sites if someone was willing to take a chance."

Many developers tend to be reluctant to deviate from conventional styles with proven salability when planning speculative homes, he suggested. But in the mountainous Charleston area, there are few standard building sites remaining.

Unlike conventional houses, the pole house required no excavating other than the holes for the pressure treated Douglas fir poles which support the structural beams of the house. To give extra strength, as well as a contemporary design, the poles were designed to go through the floor to the second level of the house.

The pole construction eliminates a common area problem of basement dampness due to inadequate waterproofing and insufficient water drainage. The house sits off the ground and required neither excavation nor fill which would have disturbed normal drainage patterns.

Because it lacks the natural insulation of a below-ground level basement, however, the house was constructed with additional insulation to aid in maintaining comfort in the area's often cold winters and hot, humid summers.

Wood poles were selected rather than steel for economy and appearance. The poles are set deeply into the ground on solid rock or 12 inches of concrete.

"Those poles will last 50 to 100 years," said Stalnaker, a two-decade Charleston resident and a telephone company employee who said he has observed the durability of phone poles.

"You can reduce construction expense by using poles," commented Stalnaker who would like to incorporate the pole idea in needed low-cost housing for West Virginia's mountainous terrain.

"I fell in love with the house," recalls Mrs. Peters, who first saw it last September when very discouraged after several days of her third house hunting trip from Columbus, Ohio, where the couple had been living.

The Peters said they appreciate the openness of the house. The structure has three enclosed rooms suitable as bedrooms or, for the Peters, as guest room, office, and pool and recreation room

But the kitchen at the middle level and the master bedroom on the top level both have interior openings looking toward the tall southern exposure windows in the cedar wall opposite. While the bedroom provides privacy, it also affords a striking view of both lower levels and of the wooded hillside outside.

Even the Peterses' furnishings, moved from Ohio, appear to have been selected to blend with the earth tones of the woods.

Mrs. Peters, who enjoys the play of the afternoon sunlight coming in four levels of south-facing windows and skylights, says that the couple plans to add only ground cover and some natural flowering shrubs outside.

"We plan to keep it as natural as we can--close to the environment," she said of landscaping plans.

"We did not try to put in a conventional yard," said Stalnaker, who avoided disturbing the natural environment anymore than necessary. In fact, he moved the house site about eight feet forward on the property rather than cut down a large tulip poplar, The lower level deck is built around the tall poplar.

INTERIOR DESIGN

Mirrors create built-in look

By PAULINE GRAVES

An empty room, or at least four blank walls, almost reduces one to a state of quivering helplessness. Where do you start? Placement of furniture comes first, and then the filling in with lesser pieces and accessories. Most of it is based on sheer logic, large furniture in big areas and against wide wall expanses. Doors and windows have to be circumvented, and traffic patterns worked out, but above all, the room has to be pleasing to the eye.

In the room shown here, by interior designer Frank Leo, one large, blank wall offered plenty of space for furniture, and since the king size bed was the largest piece its choice was obvious. But instead of being centred, the bed is at the side, 2½ feet from the adjacent wall. The off side arrangement has more interest than one that is symmetrical, and also leaves more clear space in the middle of the room.

NOW YOU KNOW

Smokey glass, building fences, temporary driveway

Q. This past winter we installed a zero clearance heat circulating fireplace with glass doors. We are quite happy with the fireplace except we find it quite difficult to clean the glass when it smokes up. What would you recommend for cleaning glass doors?

A. A number of cleaners on the market will work quite well on smoked glass doors. One of the better ones is called "Total" manufactured by G. H. Wood. It's available right across Canada in grocery stores and is a liquid cleaner.

Q. We want to build a fence on our property but are not too sure where to start. For example, my husband wants to put up quite a high fence in the backyard to keep out the noise and view of an industrial complex behind us. How high a fence can we build? Where do we find out about such things?

A. The building inspection department of your local municipality orat City Hall is the place to start. In most cities in Canada the maximum height of a fence in a backyard is six feet and in a front yard is three feet. However this does vary accordingto circumstances. In some areas you are allowed to put up a fence eight feet high if it is for the purpose of eliminating noise and the view of an industrial site. Even though this may not be allowed by the building department of the city or municipality, a special concession may be obtained in some cases for this purpose. Of course a solid fence is likely most practical in this case. So whether the fence is six feet or eight feet high, a solid board fence with the boards running vertical is the most attractive. The fence could be made from rough sawn cedar or rustic sawn material for an attractive appearance. Another good material for this type of fence is preserved wood material such as that used for preserved wood foundations or for patio decks.

Q. We want to install a temporary driveway at the back of our house. We have just moved in and there is a lot of settling of the soil around our home and we think it will settle for a year or so yet. What could we use for a driveway?

A. I would suggest that it might be best to use crushed rock for the time being. This crushed rock can then serve as a good base for either poured concrete or interlocking paving stones at a later date. Depending on your soil conditions, the crushed rock will be squashed into the base material and will settle. This may be especially true where the tires of the car run. But it is just simply a matter of maintenance, filling in the ruts and filling any depressions with more crushed rock. I highly recommend crushed rock that varies from three quarters of an inch to inch and a half. Rock that is smaller than three quarters of an inch, sand or gravel will simply disappear into most unstable soils such as clay. Also if you have any sand or gravel in the base material it will stick to your feet and track into the car and into your home. In areas where limestone is available, crushed limestone is good for this purpose. However if it is not available then crushed rock of any type, as long as it has these dimensions is quite acceptable.

Q. We have a bird bath in our backyard that we want to paint. It is made from cement and so far we haven't painted it but I think it would look much better painted. What paint would you recommend?

A. Any good quality concrete paint that is recommended for exterior use. Something like a good quality floor and porch enamel meant for concrete would be acceptable. However the best paint would be an epoxy type of paint. This will last longer and stand up under the rigors of the outdoor weather. Make sure that you clean the bird bath well before painting it, regardless of what paint you use. Use a solution of two tablespoons of trisodium phosphate (TSP) to a quart of warm water and then use a brush and rag to clean the bird bath well. Then rinse it off with clear water and let it dry for at least a week before painting. I'm not sure that it will make much difference to the birds, but it should spruce up your yard if you paint the bird bath.

TV Starscene

By RUTH THOMPSON

In addition to being a great read in its first incarnation, Empress, (Morrow) Sylvia Wallace's new novel is so juicy with glamor, intrigue, the use (and misuse) of power from Boston to Hollywood to the Middle East that you know it's destined for a further life on film. Should it be movies or television?

Petite, earnest, honest Sylvia starts to speak, murmurs softly what sounds like, "TV," then edits herself. (At the fledgiling-writer stage of her career — before she married novelist Irving Wallace — Sylvia edited a major movie magazine).

"Maybe I shouldn't tell."
"Sylvia, tell!"

"Well, television. Because of the mini-series format . . . six hours would be ideal." Yes it would. Sylvia has devised a non-stop plot, but she hasn't skipped any nuances involving an American beauty who marries a royal ruler. No it isn't Princess Grace (nee Kelly) of Monaco. And it isn't Queen Noor of Jordan (nee Lisa Hallaby), but the book was already drafted, in fact, before Miss Hallaby wed King Hussein.

Sylvia says, that royal marriges aside, she drew a lot on her own life and that the heroine's own dismal relationship with her mother is as vital to the plotting as all that Hollywood insight.

TV Mailbag

I recently fell in love with the TV movie, The Golden Moment, when it was repeated on TV. I would like to know if David Keith, who played the American athlete, is going to be in anything else. The movie really inspired me to train for the 1984 Olympics. — Hannah Horch, Mayville, Ky.

Keith, who has made the jump to the big screen, is currently seen with Robert Redford in Brubaker. He's working now with Sally Field and Tommy Lee Hones in Back Roads, a film being directed by Martin Ritt (Norma Rae) in Mobile, Ala. Good luck in '84.
